CHINA.

The Convention With the United States Concluded by Mr. Burlingame and the Embassy—Refusal of the Pekin Government to Ratify it—Mr. Burlingame's Policy Denounced by J. Ross Browne.

HONG KONG, Aug. 3, via LONDON, Aug. 25.—The Pekin Government refuses to ratify the convention concluded by Mr. BURLINGAME and the Chinese Embassy with the United States.

Mr. J. ROSS BROWNE, late American Minister to China, in reply to an address of the British and American residents in Shanghae, denounced Mr. BURLINGAME'S policy, and said he considered it an evidence of the Chinese disinclination for progress. He declared the establishment of foreign relations with China, on a basis of equality, impossible at present, and thought the yielding attitude of the foreign Powers would tend to produce war, as revelations lately made proved the mistaken nature of the British policy.

The Chinese text of Mr. BURLINGAME'S credentials differs from the foreign version. In the former he is appointed Envoy of China to tributary nations.

The Recent Treaties—Comments of the Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The Pall Mall Gazette this evening, in an article on recent treaties with China, says:

"It was the habit of foreigners to lecture the Chinese on internal improvements. By the American treaty such interference is abandoned. China, left free, would learn to feel secure, and so come out of her shell and bear a part in the commerce of the world. It is quite intelligible to us that the American residents in China should dislike the treaty. But why should the Pekin Government dislike it? Have the Chinese discovered some underhand design to filch concessions under the pretence of modifying former ones? Or is this refusal to imply an accession of hostility against foreigners, which prompts the Chinese to reject negotiations for their own benefit?"

HARVARD AND OXFORD.

Prospects of the American Crew—Kelley's Opinion of the Result of the Race—Comments of the Times.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The Harvard and Oxford University crews were out to-day, but only made short trips up and down the river. The Harvards to-day have been practicing starts. They have decided to use ELLIOTT'S boat for the race. WALTER BROWN, who recently arrived here with TYLER, will assist at the start. KELLEY confidently asserts that Harvard must win, and thinks the match will be virtually finished before the boats reach Hammersmith Bridge. BROWN also declares his belief that the Americans will come in first. To-night the betting stands two to one on Oxford.

The arrangements for preserving order on and about the river on the day of the race are all that could be desired. The Commissioners of the Police have detailed eight hundred men to guard the river banks during the race.

Arrangements for the match between WALTER BROWN and RENFORTH have not yet been completed. BROWN declines to row on the Tyne, finding that river unsuitable, but has no objection to the Thames. RENFORTH will probably accept BROWN'S challenge to row on the latter river.

The Times to-day, in commenting on the coming boat race between the Harvard and Oxford crews, says: "Good judges assert that the Harvards show signs of overtraining. The river watermen, however, favor the idea that they must win the race. Boating men generally are divided, the majority being in favor of Oxford."

The London Rowing Club will give a banquet on Monday evening to the gentlemen forming the Harvard and Oxford boat crews.

FRANCE.

Reception of the Report on the Senatus Consultum in the Senate—The Modifications.

PARIS, Aug. 25.—In the Senate to-day the report of the Committee on the Senatus Consultum was read. The principal modifications made by the Committee are as follows: The Senate may reject a law without giving reasons. The Government, on demanding that ordres de jour motivés (i. e., votes of confidence, or want of confidence,) be referred to the bureau, may appoint a commission to report on the same. A decree will establish the regulations rendered necessary by the Senatus Consultum and will define the constitutional relations of the great powers of the State.

Another Colliery Explosion—Fourteen Persons Killed.

The Emperor has nearly recovered from his recent indisposition.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Proposed New Cable from Ireland to America.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—A new telegraphic cable on VARLEY'S principle is projected from Ireland to America.

The Crops—Reports of the London Times.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The Times to-day has an editorial on the prospects and prices of grain, wherein it says: "We may look for a year of sufficiency, if not of abundance. The harvest is within thirteen per cent. of the average; and with the continuance of the present favorable weather, it may still improve. All the crops, except wheat, are luxuriant. With good corn imported and sold under fifty shillings per quarter, we can easily afford to lose a little home-grown wheat for the sake of a plentiful stock of food and better pastures."

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The Pall Mall Gazette, referring to the difficulties of the Albert Life Insurance Company, says it is idle to ask whether Englishmen or Americans are best situated with respect to life insurance. Of all the guarantees and precautions exacted in the State of New-York, hardly one is contemplated by English law.

TURKEY AND EGYPT.

Proposed Reception of the Khedive of Egypt by the Sultan—Settlement of the "Egyptian Difficulty."

BRUSSELS, Aug. 25.—The Indépendance Belge has information that the Khedive of Egypt is shortly expected at Constantinople. The Sultan is preparing to extend him a grand reception. The complete reconciliation of ISMAIL PASHA and the Sublime Porte is an accomplished fact, and the Egyptian question is over.

CUBA.

A Singular Report—Over 1,600 Insurgents Asking Forgiveness of the Spanish Authorities—Offers of Money by the Spanish Bank.

HAVANA, Aug. 25.—Insurgents with their families, to the number of 1,600, have presented themselves before the Spanish authorities near Holguin, and asked for forgiveness and protection. Twenty other insurgents have presented themselves before the Spanish authorities in the Cinco Villas District.

The Spanish Bank has made an offer of $45,000 to the Government for the support of volunteer regiments. This makes the fourth donation of a similar amount, by the bank, for the support of the volunteers.

Movements in General Jordan's District—An Early Engagement Expected.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Letters from the Cuban revolutionary army, via Key West, to friends in this city, contain news up to the 16th. No engagement is reported since the one near Puerto Padre on the 5th, an account of which has been published. In the district commanded by General JORDAN, all the available Spanish force is being thrown in this district to reinforce VALMASEDA, and an early engagement of importance may be expected between the forces of JORDAN and VALMASEDA. General JORDAN asserts his readiness and desire for the contest, and is confident of success. It is stated that a defeat of VALMASEDA would virtually end the war, as it would be impossible for Spain ever to send troops enough to regain the positions which they would lose. General JORDAN is placing his men in position for the fight, which was almost daily expected. In General QUESADA'S command, except a few skirmishes between small parties, it is reported there have been no engagements. The Spanish troops occupy fortified positions in the towns, and have suffered so severely from disease and other causes that the commanders are unable to do more than maintain their positions.

The Spanish Sanguine of Preserving Cuba—Views of a Paris Correspondent.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The Paris correspondent of the Times writes as follows on the subject of the Cuban question: "Most of the Spaniards are sanguine of preserving Cuba. There is much disappointment manifested at the small success in repressing the rebellion there. The argument that Cuba is a loss and not a gain to Spain, is absurd. Spain is benefited largely by the productiveness and commerce of Cuba."

The correspondent thinks that the immediate annexation of Cuba to the United States is not desired by the American Government, but that England or France are not likely to offer any opposition to the scheme.

SPAIN.

No Change in the Situation—The Roving Bands of Carlists.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 25.—The Madrid correspondent of the Indépendance Belge says:

"Nothing is changed. The situation is the same. Armed bands still traverse the Provinces. ZABARIEGO continues at the head of the force, which was reported dispersed and destroyed some time ago."

PRESIDENT GRANT.

His Journey from Newport to Concord, N. H.—His Reception at Manchester and Concord.

BOSTON, Aug. 25.—President GRANT arrived in this city to-day from Newport, reaching the depot about 11 o'clock A. M. He took a carriage and was driven immediately to the Lowell station, where a special train was in readiness to convey him to Concord.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 25.—President GRANT and party reached this city at 1:30 P. M., and was received at the railway station by Mayor SMITH in a short speech, to which he briefly replied. The arrival of the President was announced by a salute of twenty-one guns from the Manchester Battery.

After the introductory ceremony the party proceeded at once to visit the print works and passed up through the yards of the several corporations between thick ranks of the operatives, who were arranged by the sides of the mills. The party then took carriages and passed through the most important streets of the city. In the party were Governor STEARNS, and members of his staff, Ex-Governors HARRIMAN and SMYTHE, Secretaries BOUTWELL and HOAR, and other prominent gentlemen. The city was tastefully decorated with flags, &c. At precisely 3 o'clock the President waived his adieu and left for Concord.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 25.—President GRANT arrived here at 3:30 o'clock precisely, and was immediately escorted to the State House, where he was introduced from the front steps to the assembled crowd by Governor STEARNS in a few well-chosen remarks. He was then introduced to Mayor STEVENS, who welcomed the President to the hospitality of the city in a brief address, to which the President replied, expressing regret at not being able to spend more time among the Granite Hills. A general hand shaking and introduction then followed.

GETTYSBURG.

The Reunion—Officers Present—The Proceedings of Yesterday.

GETTYSBURG, Aug. 25.—The arrivals to-day include, among others, Generals Fowler and Gates, of the First Army Corps; General Webb, of the Second Corps; General Chamberlain, Adjutant-General Locke and Colonel S. M. Jackson, of the Fifth Corps; General Hunt, Chief of Artillery, and Major Moore, of the Twelfth Corps. Among others now here are Major W. C. Armor, Aide-de-Camp to General Geary, and General Hall, of the Second Maine Artillery, which opened the engagement under General Reynolds in the first day's battle; General Serrell, Colonels Southren, Hartshorne, Irwin, Major W. A. Keilly, Captains J. Watson, Jr., John R. Paxton, Colonel W. M. Boone, late Adjutant-General of the Maryland Brigade, and General H. V. Boynton, who commanded a regiment in the Army of the Cumberland.

General TREDMAN, late Adjutant-General of General SCHURZ, regrets he cannot be present, owing to sickness in his family. General GREGG, who had command of the cavalry on the right, expects to attend before the close of the week. Adjutant-General TOWNSEND says he cannot be present, because of business engagements at Washington.

This morning, in accordance with previous arrangements, a party proceeded to examine a designated point of the battle-field. It consisted of General Slocum, Governor Geary, Generals Greene, Barnum, Selfridge, Kane, Fowler, Shaler, Meredith, Van Amsburg, Kana, Steinwher, Flanders, McFarland, Freauff and Asumster; Major Selfridge, and many others. The party examined the position at the Cemetery, Culp's Hill, and the immediate neighborhood, embracing the positions held in that locality on the days of the battle by the Eleventh and Twelfth Corps and a part of the First and Sixth Corps. Several disputed positions were settled, it being conceded by one party to the other that a misapprehension had existed. The adjustment of the question was preceded by narratives of circumstances happening at the points in controversy.

In the afternoon a party consisting of Generals SLOCUM, GREENE, KANE, BARNUM and others, visited the vicinity of Round Top. A large part of the field of battle being owned by private citizens, prominent military men and civilians who examined the ground to-day, had a conference with a view to purchasing and adding it to the section now under the control of the Battle-field Memorial Association. It was thought the Legislatures of the States which sent troops to this field should subscribe, in part, the required amount of money to effect such purchase, and that Congress also be asked to assist. In addition to this it is desired that the breastworks be preserved from further destruction, and that those which have been removed should be restored, as far as possible, to their original condition.

The grand reunion ball and reception, civic and military, took place to-night at the Springs Hotel. It was largely attended by the guests and ladies of Gettysburg.

LABOR REFORM.

The Boston Convention—Proceedings of the First Day—Radical Changes Proposed in the Government of the Country.

BOSTON, Aug. 25.—The State Labor Reform Convention began its sessions in this City to-day. Quite a large number of men and women, including many professional reformers, are present. In the forenoon session the organization was effected. In the afternoon Mr. DAVIS, of New-York, first addressed the Convention. He declared that workingmen had not their rights, and their votes alone could purify the ballot. He closed by presenting a series of resolutions in the form of a memorial to Congress, asking, among other things, the abolishing of the Senate and the turning over of the whole legislative power to the House of Representatives; and also the alteration of the Constitution so that all acts shall be submitted to the people for their several consideration.

Mr. WALKER, of Alabama, made the next address. In the course of his remarks he denied that the people of the South desired the importation of Chinese coolie labor.

A Committee on Resolutions was appointed, to whom all resolutions are to be referred.

Considerable discussion then took place on a motion to form a Massachusetts Labor Union, to coöperate with the National Union. Action on it was postponed until to-morrow.

In the evening General WEST, of Mississippi, made an address to the Convention on the currency question, advising the adoption of a coöperative system, so that laboring men might be masters of their own labor and enjoy all its profits. He also advised independent political action, having no faith in what either Republican or Democratic organizations would do in the interests of labor. No business was done, and the Convention adjourned till to-morrow.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 25.—A special dispatch from Helena, Montana, says the Canfield division of the North Pacific reconnoitering party returned last evening from Fort Benton, Fort Shaw, and Cadott's Pass. J., Aug. 25.—BURTON STOUT, aged 19 years, Miss ANNIE ROGERS and Miss MARTHA HUNTER, all of Philadelphia, were drowned while bathing at 11 o'clock this morning in front of the Lighthouse Cottage bathing grounds. There were but two other persons bathing at the time, and they were unable to render any assistance, as there were no appliances at hand for saving life, the United States Hotel lifeboat having been hauled up for the season. The bodies of Mr. STOUT and Miss HUNTER came ashore about 12 o'clock, and that of Miss ROGERS at 1 o'clock P. M. Their remains were taken to Philadelphia on the 4:15 P. M. train, accompanied by the relatives. At the time of the disaster there was but little surf, and the tide was down.

She took the poison with the avowed purpose of ending her troubles.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES.

Store and Dwelling-House Burned in Baltimore—Great Loss of Property.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 25.—A fire broke out this morning just before 12 o'clock in the oakum factory of ROBERT HANNA, on Thames-street, and soon thereafter communicated to the lumber-yard of J. W. RANDOLPH, corner of Wolford and Lancaster streets, Fell's Point. The entire block bounded by Lancaster, Thames, Wolf and Ann streets, and twelve houses, many of them dwellings, were entirely destroyed before the flames could be checked, and thirteen others more or less damaged. The machine shops of E. H. FRAZIER & Co. were destroyed, together with six new engines. Their loss is $55,000, and insurance light. The loss on RANDOLPH'S lumber-yard, which was totally destroyed, is $35,000; insurance less than $7,000. The total loss and insurance cannot now be definitely ascertained. This is the most destructive fire that has occurred in Baltimore for ten years.

The houses burned were all small affairs, with the exception of one or two, and all having shingle roofs, which had been dried and scorched to the condition of tinder by the hot sun of the last few weeks, the flames burned with the greatest rapidity, and the strong wind which was blowing at the time drove the flames from one house to the other. The houses were nearly all occupied by German families and were densely tenanted, in some as many as a dozen families living together. Taken by surprise as they were, they rushed out in the utmost haste, and from doors, windows and roofs household goods and chattels came tumbling down into the streets.

The engines made good time, but the streams of water which were directed on the burning buildings seemed for some time to have but little effect in subduing the flames, owing to the high wind and the dry materials which were feeding the fire. The firemen were partially devoting themselves to deluging the surrounding houses with water, they being in great danger from the sparks, which were whirled about by the wind in every direction. The excitement in the lower portion of the city was very great, and the streets in the vicinity of the fire were densely crowded.

Fire in Cincinnati—Destruction of a Paper Warehouse and Other Property.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 25.—Messrs. CHATFIELD & WOOD'S wholesale paper warehouse, Nos. 77 and 79 Walnut-street, was almost totally destroyed by fire which broke out at 6 P. M., in the fifth story, in the engine-room. Loss about $100,000; insured for $62,500 as follows: $5,000 each in the Fireman's, Manhattan, Market and Security, of New-York; Pacific, of New-Haven; Delaware, Mutual, Safety, of Philadelphia; Sun, of Cleveland, and the remainder in home companies. The building was owned by W. WILSHIRE. Insured for $15,000 in Cincinnati companies, which will probably cover the loss. BISHOP BROTHERS, wholesale grocers, loss by water $2,000; principally insured in Cincinnati and Liverpool companies.

Disastrous Fire in Rockland, Me.—Heavy Loss.

ROCKLAND, Me., Aug. 25.—A disastrous fire broke out this morning in the kiln sheds on Lowell's Point, in this city, and spread with great rapidity, until in a very short space of time the sheds connected with ten kilns, together with a large quantity of kiln-wood, lime and lime casks, were totally destroyed. The wharves were also badly damaged. The loss will not be less than $40,000, divided among Messrs. William Wilson, Whitney & Co., J. W. Hunt, C. Hanrahan, William McHoon, Joseph S. Wheeler, J. W. Soule, Warren Fales, Messer & Fales and A. C. Pease. The property is insured to the amount of $20,000.

BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—The case of the United States against W. S. KIMBALL, tobacco manufacturer, of Rochester, N. Y., charged with rendering fraudulent returns to the Revenue Department, which has occupied the United States Court here for several days past, was, this morning, decided in favor of the Government. The verdict carries a forfeiture of the tobacco, machinery, &c., seized and bonded by the Government, to the value of $20,000. The case has excited much interest among business men throughout the country on account of the many intricate legal points involved. The criminal indictment against Mr. KIMBALL will be tried at the October term of the United States Court.

WASHINGTON.

Postponement of the Cabinet Meeting—The Proposed Removal of the Capital—The Humboldt Celebration—The Revenue Marine Service—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The President, it is announced, has postponed his return to Washington until Monday next, so there will be no Cabinet meeting on Friday next. The regular Cabinet meeting will be held on Tuesday, the 31st. President GRANT'S present intention appears to be to leave here about the 3d of September for Saratoga and Lake George, where he will spend a few days. So far as the Cabinet meeting on Tuesday is concerned, only mere routine will be transacted. About three of the Secretaries will be present. Secretary ROBESON having completed the tour and inspection of nearly all the Navy-yards on the Atlantic coast, is expected back during the early part of next week. Mr. HOAR will not be here until late in September.

THE PROPOSED REMOVAL OF THE CAPITAL.

Washingtonians are becoming quite excited over the proposition to remove the capital. Their alarm finds vent in newspaper leaders and communications from staid old citizens. One journal publishes to-day two columns of letters on the subject, and another discourses in the following lugubrious strain:

"The owners of our stores and dwellings depend for their rent, our merchants, mechanics, and other trades-people for their custom almost wholly upon the disbursements of the Government to its employes, local contractors and others. The money thus disbursed is drained out of the city, month by month, almost as soon as it leaves the Government coffers; for there is scarcely a thing we need to eat, to wear, or for any other use, produced among us all are purchased elsewhere. When we reflect that the inhabitants of the city number nearly 100,000, while the employes of the Government are scarcely one in twelve of this population, the impossibility of our people prospering under existing conditions is self-evident. People with capital to invest, go on building restaurants, stores and other trading-places, while others rent them and stock them with goods, apparently regardless of the question where customers are to come from."

THE HUMBOLDT CELEBRATION.

The Germans of this city are determined on having a grand celebration of the one hundreth anniversary of HUMBOLDT. At a recent meeting a resolution to call a general meeting of German citizens on Sept. 3, was adopted, and it was also resolved to send invitations to the President of the United States, the members of the Cabinet, representatives of foreign nations and the Mayor of the city.

THE REVENUE MARINE SERVICE.

The Board of Examiners proper of the revenue marine service, consisting of Captains FAUNCE and SEYCER and Lieutenant FRANK BARR, left here this evening for Ogdensburg, N. Y., to commence the general examination of the lake revenue cutters. From that point they will proceed to Oswego, and thence to Erie, Penn. The Commission of Revenue Marine and Steamboat Inspection officers, appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury to examine and report upon the steam cutter Commodore Perry, will meet at Erie, Penn., on the 31st inst. The survey of the Western rivers is for the present deferred, because of the necessity for the Board to return to Washington to complete the revision of the Code of Regulations of the service. The examination of officers for the revenue marine will commence on Oct. 1. Secretary BOUTWELL has evinced the greatest interest in this branch of the service since the beginning of his administration of the Treasury Department, and he is anxious that it may be brought up to the very highest standard of efficiency. The examination of officers will therefore be conducted very thoroughly, and appointments will be made only in accordance with the report of the Board of Examiners.

TESTIMONIAL FOR A BASE BALL CLUB.

Several prominent citizens of Washington have subscribed money to a testimonial for the Olympic Base Ball Club of this city in appreciation of the victory which they gained over the Mutuals of New-York last evening. The Mutuals are not, of course, satisfied, and are coming here again on Saturday to play their late victors in the morning, and another club in the evening.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

FRACTIONAL CURRENCY.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The demands on the Treasury for fractional currency at the present time are so great, and the amounts required so large, that to supply them would necessitate the issue of currency at the rate of $200,000 a day for a year to come.

PROPOSED LICENSED GAMBLING-HOUSE IN NEW-YORK.

A letter was received at the White House to-day from Paris, written by a Frenchman, requesting the President to issue a charter authorizing him to establish a gambling-house in New-York City, to be regularly licensed and placed under the surveillance of the Police; to contribute a portion of its profits to the Government, and to be managed in all respects like the gambling-houses of Baden-Baden and Weissbaden. The name of this enterprising member of the gambling fraternity is BOLINEAUX.

THE CABINET.

It is known that the President will remain at the White Mountains for several days, and will probably not arrive here until Monday next. It is understood that the President desired to get the Cabinet together this week, but on account of the members being so widely scattered postponed the matter.

INDIAN CLAIMS.

The Secretary of the Interior has ordered that hereafter all Indian claims must be settled through the Indian Bureau. These claims include bounty and pension claims of Indian soldiers, claims for Indian depredations, &c. This decision is brought about because of the agents who overcharge their clients, a mode of defrauding which is carried on to a very great extent.

NAVY.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 25.—The most severe thunder-storm of the season occurred this afternoon. A man named KINNEY, and a team of horses were killed by lightning about a mile from the town.

SUICIDE OF A SHAKER.

The Drowning of Ellen Calver at Shaker Village, New-Lebanon, N. Y.—The Shakers' Account of Her Death—Insanity on the Point of Spirit Life in the Spirit Sphere.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HUDSON, N. Y., Wednesday, Aug. 25, 1869.

The inquest in the case of the suicide of ELLEN CALVER, the Shaker girl, is progressing, but no new facts will be developed. The first verdict given, that of suicide, will be substantiated. The Society of Shakers make the following statement, and it is universally believed and respected, and is also a clear, concise report of the whole affair:

Finding ourselves arraigned before the public, and summoned to appear before the Court, for reasons which we cannot comprehend, to answer to a case of suicide, we feel it our privilege and duty to lay before our friends the facts, as far as we know, concerning the deceased known as ELLEN CALVER.

The parents of said ELLEN CALVER sailed from England, with their family, nine in number, Nov. 14, 1849; landed at Philadelphia Jan. 1, 1850; removed to the Shakers' Society, located in the town of New-Lebanon, County of Columbia and State of New-York, May 30, 1850. Said ELLEN CALVER, daughter of JAMES and SUSAN CALVER, removed to the Church family of said Society Sept. 17, 1850, being about three years of age. ELLEN CALVER was, therefore, nurtured and reared by, and under the care of said Church family, in New-Lebanon. She early evinced a bright intellect, sensitive temperament and delicate brain; she developed to a young woman of fine sensibilities and unusual intelligence; she created and sustained an unblemished reputation through her life, and her character was above censure; veneration, firmness, self-esteem, with large hope, were predominant in her phrenological character. She was highly esteemed by the Shaker family to which she belonged, and of which she had already become a member, as well as by her parents and brothers and sisters. Her spiritual organization was large, which sometimes led her to pleasant illuminations while in the family worship; these conditions increased upon her greatly to her pleasure and satisfaction, but not always so much so to her surrounding friends; suitable caution was often dealt out in counsel, at various times, to balance her growing propensity for spirit communion; care was taken that she should not be exposed to grow melancholy, (as she was some inclined to be,) and all that could excite such a condition was carefully avoided.

ELLEN CALVER was never heard, by any person in the Shaker Society nor outside of it, as we can learn, to express any dissatisfaction with her Shaker home, Shaker discipline, or Shaker religion; therefore, the only cause, as some suppose, which could have led to so untimely and disagreeable an exit is insanity on the point of spirit life in the spirit sphere. Others of the Shakers supposed it was caused by the use of copal varnish, which she had been applying to a bedstead of her own, in a confined room, some two or three hours before her death, and which, she afterward said, made her head feel dizzy and very badly; and, indeed, it did affect her very disagreeably.

The parents of ELLEN CALVER resided, since 1854, within an hour's walk of our village, and in sight of it; she frequently visited them, sometimes at our office in the village, and sometimes at their own house; and she attended her deceased father a portion of the time during his last week's illness.

On the sorrowful day in which her mortal tenement was drowned, being Saturday, June 5, 1869, she appeared as usual, save the effects of the varnish, as before mentioned; she did not appear at dinner with the family, which was served at 12 o'clock. About fifteen minutes after dinner it was announced by a youth, JOSEPH CREAMER, (who had gone to the pond to ascertain the temperature of the water, and see if it was fit for bathing,) that a girl was drowned in the pond. People immediately rallied, both those who were not as well as those who were of our community. The body was taken from the water and the usual means for restoration from drowning were resorted to; rolling first, then friction, artificial respiration, the warm bath and the galvanic battery. Efforts continued to be made until fifteen minutes before 2 o'clock to restore animation, but without effect. Preparation was then made to lay out the corpse according to our common custom; strangers coming to our office, who desired it, were permitted to go and see the corpse, among whom was one of the prominent physicians of the town, Dr. WRIGHT, who advised to call a Coroner, but most of those present appeared to think it was sufficient to employ a Justice of the Peace. BENJAMIN GATES, one of the Trustees of the Society, made inquiry of a number of the neighbors who the Coroner was, but none of them seemed to recollect, but near night he learned the Coroner resided in the town of Chatham. Accordingly, as had been the usual custom of the town outside of the Shaker community, and sometimes by the Shakers, a Justice of the Peace was called to perform the ordinary duties of a Coroner, and on Monday, June 7, Esquire BULL, of New-Lebanon Springs, summoned a respectable jury, the greater portion of which consisted of people not belonging to our community; witnesses were duly examined, and after mature deliberation, and all necessary examinations of the corpse, according to the opinions of that jury, a verdict was rendered of "death by drowning, while in a state of temporary insanity."

The funeral was attended on Tuesday following, June 8, not only by our own Shaker family, but by friends and neighbors outside, and her brother, from a distance. The corpse was incased in a neatly-made, unstained coffin, according to our usual practice, we never stain our coffins, nor ornament them with plates and trimmings, but make a neatly-jointed plain case, and of the whitest wood we can secure.) It was interred with our usual ceremonies.

On July 28, 1869, after seven weeks' interment, the body was exhumed, by order of Coroner ALLEN, of Chatham, who was duly notified of the demise of ELLEN CALVER (as we are told) by a near neighbor to the Shakers. Dr. SALMON made an examination of the corpse to the satisfaction of the presiding jury, (none of whom reside in the community of Shakers.) No marks of violence were found on the body. EDWARD FOWLER, in behalf of the Shakers' Society, directed that further examination should be made, which was done, and we were assured that nothing appeared to question the fact that the deceased had lived a virtuous life, according to the known profession of virgin purity of the Society of which she was a member.

Verdict, Suicide by Drowning.

HUDSON, N. Y., Aug. 25.—The Coroner's jury in the case of ELLEN CALVERT, the shakeress, after deliberating half an hour, returned a verdict at noon to-day, that the deceased committed suicide by drowning, on the 5th of July last, in the pond where the body was found. The jury was divided on the question as to the sanity of the deceased.

Reported Double Duel in Chicago.

From the Chicago Post, Aug. 23.

The following story is current about town, and said to be well founded: A young husband of this city, whose wife had been basely slandered by a former rejected suitor for her hand, administered to her libeler a severe whipping recently, and was afterward challenged to fight a duel with pistols by the party castigated. Seconds were chosen, the Benedict taking a friend and rather noted duelist named TRISCH, a Hungarian, along with him. A spot had been selected for the affair on the Indiana State line, and on Wednesday last the parties were promptly on the ground at 1 o'clock. The distance was measured, and the principals, to what was evidently about to prove a very bloody affair, were placed in position. At the drop of a handkerchief the duelists fired, and the libeler was wounded in the left arm, but not seriously, while the husband escaped injury. Both were anxious to exchange shots again, but were prevailed upon to desist by the seconds. Meantime, a quarrel sprang up between TRISCH and the libeler, and an agreement was made to settle it with swords. This second duel showed the principals to be excellent swordsmen, but the Hungarian was the master, and literally pinned his antagonist to a tree, the foil passing through the right shoulder, and inflicting a severe though not a dangerous wound. While in this position, the slanderer of the good name of a virtuous woman was compelled to retract his vile sayings. The Hungarian was slightly wounded in the left breast. The parties returned to the city and had their wounds dressed. The names of the slanderer and slanderee are not given, for the reason that it would cause scandal and do an injury to parties undeserving of it.

THE PHILADELPHIA PARRICIDE.

Coroner's Inquest—Testimony of the Members of the Family.

From the Philadelphia Telegraph, Aug. 25.

This morning at 11 o'clock, Coroner DANIELS held an investigation into the circumstances connected with the death of THOMAS L. EVANS, who was shot yesterday morning, at No. 306 South Tenth-street, dying soon afterward from the effects of the wounds received. The inquest was held at two places—first at the scene of the parricide, then at the Coroner's office. The following evidence was obtained at the house:

Mrs. Selena A. Belcher, sworn: After leaving the breakfast table I saw Marshall K. Evans walking up and down the entry, and in and out of the parlors; he was looking up and down the stairs, waiting for his father to descend; his father had gone up stairs to change his coat to go out; I didn't know anything till I heard the report of pistols; I was just coming out of the pantry when Mr. Thom

The Senatus Consultum — Important Amendments Proposed—The Imperial Fetes—The Duelling Mania—Attacks on the Chinese Embassy.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Aug. 13, 1869.

The Committee of the Senate to which the Senatus Consultum was referred has not as yet made its report, and will probably not do so before the 20th. Although it sits with closed doors the public are kept pretty accurately informed as to the character of the amendments which have been thus far proposed and discussed. M. HUBERT DELISLE moved the addition of a clause reëstablishing the Address, that cherished privilege of Parliamentary assemblies, but which was abolished by the Empire. He was supported by M. DE LA GUERRONIERE, Minister to Belgium, and M. M. BECHIE BOUDET and MAUPAS, so that you see the spirit of liberalism has already made great progress among the partisans of the dynasty. An impression prevails that the amendment will be adopted by the Committee, but this says nothing for its fate in the Chamber, where it seems difficult to believe that it will have a chance of passing. Another amendment still more important has been proposed by M. BORJEAN. It has relation first, to the composition, and, secondly, to the attributes of the Senate. Its author proposes to raise the number of the Senators from 150 to 178, the half of this latter number to be named by the Emperor for life, and the eighty others to be elected by the Conseils Generaux for nine years, a third of this proportion to be renewed every three years. In regard to the attributes of the Chamber, he demands that the right of initiating the laws shall be given to the Senate as well as to the Corps Legislatif, so that the Upper Chamber shall be in a position to amend, or even originate them, as occasion may demand; always, of course, excepting those financial measures, the initiation and preparation of which belong of right to an assembly which emanates directly from the popular suffrage. To compensate for this increase of attributes in the Upper Chamber, the amendment proposes that the Corps Legislatif shall be invested with constituent powers to an equal extent as the Senate. Under this arrangement no modification could henceforth be effected in the Constitution without the concurrence of the three estates. It is objected to it that, with this new attribute, the Senate would crush the Legislative body by its omn potence, inasmuch as, according to the terms of the amendment, it would have a right to oppose definitively the promulgation of the laws voted by the Chamber. It should, however, be remembered, that it assimilates closely to the English system, in which the Lords enjoy similar privileges, but are half the time afraid to use them. While the general tendency of the amendments proposed may be said to be toward the extension of the reforms conceded by the Emperor, there are some which indicate a different spirit. Thus, one moved by M. ROULAND, formerly Minister of Public Instruction and now Governor of the Bank of France, calls for the rejection of article 2 of the Senatus Consultum, which establishes Ministerial responsibility, and for an absolute return to article 13 of the Constitution. This is one of the last kicks of the Conservative fraction of the Chamber, which believes that political progress is synonymous with revolution and anarchy.

THE IMPERIAL FETES.

The preparations for the Imperial fêtes this year do not differ in any essential points from those of the last, although public expectation had been somewhat excited on the subject. The day is to open with the usual artillery salute from the cannon of the Invalides. During the morning food and clothing are to be distributed to the poor, under the direction of the Mayors and the Benevolent Committees. At Notre Dame a Grand Mass is to be celebrated at 1 o'clock, and is to be followed by a Te Deum sung by the artists of the opera. With the consistency which characterizes all such celebrations here, at the same hour at which the religious ceremonies commence all the theatres of the capital are to be thrown open free to the public. In the Champs de Mars there are to be, as usual, military scenic performances in temporary theatres erected for the purpose, exhibitions of juggling and pole-climbing, gymnastic feats, &c. The canotiers de la Seine are to exhibit their prowess in a regatta, which is to be run from the Pont des Invalides to the Ile de Grenelle. In the evening illuminations and fireworks on the Place de la Concorde and the Champs Elysee, finishing up with a grand pyrotechnic display at the Trocadero and the Place du Trone.

THE DUELLING MANIA.

The duel in which M. FLOURENS risked his life for a public principle has been followed by a second challenge to M. PAUL DE CASSAGNAC, the terms of which are so eccentric that I translate them for the amusement of your readers:

SIR: I come to you armed with my convictions and with my heart full of hatred. If you are not the last of cowards you shall kill me or die. Between us there can be no truce. The moment our eyes are fixed on each other, one of us must disappear into nothingness, (sic.) Understand clearly that there is no longer any question between us of what you call the figuring of the carving knife or the assurance of the sword, but of the arm that kills. It is with hand on breast and pistol on forehead that I wish to hold you. Ignorant as to which of us has the loaded weapon, destiny will be our judge.

I await here your acceptance. In a few days I shall be free and at your service.

GAILLARD, Pere,
Political prisoner in St. Pelagie.

It is needless to add that M. PAUL CASSAGNAC has declined this invitation. Professed duellists do not like such close quarters.

POSTAL RELATIONS WITH AMERICA.

From all that I can learn, the efforts of the special commission which has been sent over here by the Postmaster-General at Washington to negotiate a new postal convention with France on the basis of the conventions made by our Government in 1867 with other European States, are not likely to prove successful. The old postal treaty with France expires on the 1st of January, 1870, and unless a fresh one can be negotiated in the interval, the postal relations of the two countries will relapse into the unequal and vexatious state of things which existed previously. Seeing the yearly increasing importance to France of the American trade, and the large amount of money spent by American visitors in the French capital, it is incredible that the Imperial Government should desire to perpetuate the inconveniences to which the present high rates of postage between the two countries give rise. If the object be to shut out American newspapers it would be better to avow it frankly and make a discrimination in favor of letters, the postage on which is now oppressively heavy. As regards them, at least, it would seem that the Government here would find it to its interest to adopt the standard of weight and uniformity of postage established between the United States and Great Britain. One of its first results would be an important increase in the revenue from this source—a consideration not to be despised in the present condition of the public finances here. I can hardly believe that the French Government will persist in overlooking the advantages of the convention offered it by the United States, but should it be foolish enough to do so, the legislative bodies which are about to receive under the Senatus Consultum a large accession of power, will probably take the matter up and carry it through.

THE CHINESE MISSION.

In an extract from the Shanghae News Letter, which I find in the NEW-YORK TIMES of the 30th of July, I see the following statement:

"It is understood that a gentleman competent to the task is busily engaged in the preparation of a pamphlet on the Burlingame Mission. Some interesting developments not calculated to place the Mission in a very favorable light may be confidently looked for."

The Pekin letter from which this is taken bears date May 26. The above is another of the insidious efforts which are making to damage the Mission to which I recently called your attention. Unable to effect anything with the Chinese Government, which reposes the utmost confidence in Mr. BURLINGAME and his colleagues, the English and French cliques in Pekin and Shanghae, whose interests are likely to be damaged by their success, are resorting to the most unprincipled means to convey an impression abroad that the Embassy has exceeded its powers, and that it has fallen under the displeasure of the Imperial Government. As I proved to you in a recent letter, nothing can be further from the truth. The most perfect understanding continues to exist between the members of the Legation and the administration at Pekin. The object of the pamphlet alluded to is to create a belief that the English translation which has been made of the instructions given to the Embassy is an unfaithful one, and that the original document does not authorize the steps which Mr. BURLINGAME has taken.

The reply to these assertions is very simple. The correctness of the translation has been certified to by Dr. MARTIN, Dr. WILLIAMS and Mr. BROWN, three of the most eminent Chinese scholars of whom Europe or America can boast. But if their attestation did not exist, the fact that the Embassy is in monthly communication with the Chinese Government, and that the latter has been kept regularly posted as to the proceedings of Mr. BURLINGAME and his colleagues, and has signified its cordial approval of every step that has been taken, would be sufficient to disprove the assertion that they had in any way exceeded their instructions. The object of the calumny which has been circulated through a variety of other channels, is to throw obstacles in the way of the Mission at the European Courts by creating an impression that the latter have to deal with negotiators who are acting on their own discretion, and not on their written instructions, and whose proceedings may be repudiated by the Chinese Government.

The author of the pamphlet announced by the Shanghae paper is an individual named VON GUMPACH, an Austrian, I believe, by birth, who has resided a good many years in China, and who has become noted there for his eccentricities. Among the number of wild theories which have emanated from his brain is one which seeks to prove that the globe is much smaller than geographers compute it to be, and to this fact he attributes the many blunders that are made in navigation, and the numerous shipwrecks that result from them. He possesses about as much knowledge of Chinese as he does of Sanscrit; and therefore his assertions on the matter in question are just as much entitled to credit as his startling scientific discoveries. His "mares' nests" can be counted by the dozen, but this last one exceeds all its predecessors in boldness and impudence.

Gold—The American and Irish Question—Agitation in Favor of Protection—The Religious Discussion—"Up in a Balloon"—A Defence of the Girl of the Period.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 14, 1869.

I read in a New-York telegram that "a strong bear party is selling gold." Mr. LOWE is also down on gold and a gold currency. Gold may flow up or down the Mississippi, but he would very much prefer paper. He confesses, however, that there is a prejudice in this country in favor of gold, and that it must be humored, but he would be glad to do it at less cost to the Government. Some of his statistics on the subject are curious. I give them to reconcile you to your cheap paper currency. The coinage of this country, Mr. LOWE says, is in a most unsatisfactory state, and the waste is enormous. Of sovereigns £98,000,000 have been coined, and of these £44,000,000 have disappeared altogether—exported and not come back, or melted down at home. The Government coins for nothing, and so has the trouble and cost of supplying a large part of the world with a currency. Then people pick out all the heavy sovereigns and melt them down. For years there was an establishment close by the mint that carried on this business. The mint assayed and coined the gold one day, and this factory melted it down into ingots the next. Then the business went to Paris, and is now carried on at Brussels. Sovereigns are the most convenient form of gold for export, and, as they cost nothing to make and are of a known standard and weight, they are got by the shipload. Then the country has come to be so full of light sovereigns, made so by wear, sweating, &c., that it will cost some £150,000 to recoin them. Mr. LOWE is in favor of charging a royalty on coinage and reducing the sovereign to the French standard—one to 25 francs. If the French will adopt the gold standard, and you will make your half-eagle just 25 francs, there will be a pretty uniform currency over a large part of the world.

THE AMERICAN AND IRISH QUESTION.

The American and English Governments have agreed to say no more about the Alabama claims for the present, and if Mr. MOTLEY does not choose to bring them forward no English Minister will trouble him about them. But the subject seems to be a favorite one for public lecturers. A clergyman gave a lecture this week in Birmingham on the "American and Irish Questions." He said it was dangerous to let these claims stand over indefinitely. Englishman who subscribed to the Confederate loan were a disgrace to their country. The war was prolonged a year and ten months by English gold. But the English people had no part in this atrocious proceeding—the aristocracy had it all to themselves. No wonder there was a strong feeling in America against England, which made them have a high tariff. This kept Staffordshire and Birmingham goods out of America. The penchant of our aristocracy for upholding slavery thus affected the wages of workingmen, and the lending of money by our nobility and gentry to the Southern States, to build ships and make war upon the North, and establish slavery in the South, had kept gold out of the pockets of the workingmen whom he addressed. With regard to Fenianism, he said he loathed it, but that it existed was the fault of England. Why did this country ever permit a paltry set of aristocrats, bishops and deans, to take the land from the Irish people, and then to pitch-cap, hang, and quarter, torture and starve them, and drive them from their country across the Atlantic, with hatred burning in their hearts against England? But a new and a better day had dawned for Ireland. In 1871 there would be 570,000 acres of land to be disposed of, and he wished it could be put up in lots of eight or ten acres, to be bid for by the people. He would rejoice to see in Ireland 6,000 happy families, settled upon farms of ten acres each, instead of one old man (the Archbishop of Armagh) having 60,000 acres. There were nearly 600,000 acres of land in Ireland in the hands of twelve old bishops and thirty-two deans, besides which there were large tracts of Crown lands growing gorse. There were 6,000,000 of people in Ireland; but the land of Ireland belonged to five hundred men. And who were they? They were, for the most part, the same men who owned England as well as Ireland. The Marquis of —— had many thousands of acres in this neighborhood and many thousands in Ireland, and spent, perhaps, £60,000 a year in Paris—how? In a way that no Englishman ought to live in. This man never went near Ireland. Beyond receiving his revenues, he paid just enough attention to his estates to turn tenants out occasionally, and raise rents to enrich himself still further. Ireland was in the hands of such men as this. That country that once belonged to a million of people—MACAULAY said so—now belonged to 500. The land of England belonged to the very same lot, and they had not only the land but the universities, the bishoprics and deaneries, and most of the wealth of the country, while the poor were toiling and starving. The people of England must look more to the land question. Birmingham, this reverend agrarian said, was now depending upon Russian trade instead of American.

PROTECTION.

But there is growing up an agitation here in favor of protection. The Times has a report of a meeting at Shoreditch Town Hall, "to take into consideration the present critical state of the country, the depression of trade, and the general want of employment consequent on the importation of foreign manufactured goods, and to petition Parliament for a commission of inquiry as to the working of our commercial policy." The large hall was tolerably well filled with workingmen, who were, as a rule, unanimous in their denunciations of the policy which admitted of free trade in manufactured goods without any system of reciprocity from other countries. Emigration was condemned, as Englishmen might be wanted to defend their country; and the French Treaty was condemned, on the ground that it gave protection to France and the products of French industry. All commercial treaties, in fact, in turn came in for animadversion, and the example of America was held up, to show that what was, whether rightly or wrongly, considered one of the most advanced countries in the world, protected the native manufacturers or those who sought her shores with the most stringent prohibitive duties, in order that their own industries might not be subjected to foreign competition. The present stagnation of trade, the increase in the number of bankrupts, the increase of pauperism, the increase of emigration were all laid down, with more or less want of logic or reasoning, to the spread of the principles of free trade.

At the close it was unanimously resolved,

"That the principle of free trade should be based upon an equality of international exchanges; but other nations not having adopted the principle it has become injurious to England, and is the cause of the present depression of trade, the want of employment, and the increase of pauperism. This meeting, therefore, considers it to be the duty of the Government to institute an immediate inquiry into the working of our commercial policy, with the view of ascertaining how far this unreciprocated free trade contributes toward producing this depression, want of employment, and pauperism; and to what extent it may be limited so as to produce an effectual remedy."

There is, I believe, a free-trade organization in New-York. If they have a spare missionary they should send him over to reconvert these starving workingmen to free-trade principles.

THE RELIGIOUS DISCUSSIONS.

The religious discussions continue with their usual acrimony. An English Vicar has written to the Daily Telegraph to predict specifically the judgments that are to come upon the land for the national apostacy of disestablishment. We may look in the near future, he says, for famine, pestilence, civil commotions, naval and military disasters, loss of prestige and national degradation, the overthrow of the national churches of England and Scotland, the subversion of the religious dynasty, the overthrow of the House of Lords, separation of Ireland from England, to be followed by the shivering to pieces of the British Empire. This reverend does not wear the vestments, or need them at present, for he hath clothed himself with cursing. The Dean of Ely, preaching at Great Yarmouth, said it would be absurd to deny that recent legislation must affect the Church of England, but her great danger was her "horrible internal divisions," and these any one may see grow day by day more violent.

Miss EMILY FAITHFUL, Publisher in Ordinary to the Queen, and editor of the Victoria Magazine, has taken a curious way to vindicate her Anglican orthodoxy. Mr. JAMES GRANT, editor of the Advertiser, in the introduction to his recent work on The Religious Tendencies of the Times, chiefly an attack on Ritualism and Popery, mentioned Miss FAITHFUL as engaged in establishing a woman's secular club. She sued him for libel, but consented to accept nominal damages on Mr. GRANT's promising to do justice to her pious Anglicanism. The case has brought out a shower of women's letters. It seems that Mr. and Mrs. HOLYOKE, noted secularists, were active in assisting Miss FAITHFUL to establish her feminine printing office, and that one of her friends gave her name to the club; but the spiteful way in which the ladies expose each other in the matter is very amusing. Mr. GRANT and Miss FAITHFUL, however, withdrew all imputations against each other, and came out of Court, metaphorically speaking, arm in arm, without a stain on their characters.

"UP IN A BALLOON."

"Up in a balloon," the refrain of the popular music hall song, was running in Mr. GLADSTONE's head the other night, and he applied it to the House of Lords, and apologized for it a few days after, when the Upper House had prudently come down. The Lords are, no doubt, habitually up in a balloon; but it is one of the Cremorne captive sort, held to the earth by a strong cable, and can be brought down whenever GLADSTONE and BRIGHT, with a working majority in the House of Commons, choose to tug a little at the windlass. But Peers are not alone up in balloon. Paupers may go up as well. A few days ago an old woman in the Chelsea Workhouse completed her hundredth year, and the authorities, considering that their institution was honored by such an instance of longevity, asked her how she would like to celebrate her centenary. "Send me up in the big balloon," said she, "and let me have a good look at the beautiful world I have lived in a hundred years. There's a romantic and poetical old peapes for you! But the balloon goes up every fair day in sight of the workhouse; a beautiful object floating over the southwestern suburbs. The guardians were taken with the idea, and immediately arranged a party to ascend with the ancient dame. They went up two hundred feet, stayed half an hour, looked down on the beautiful world as well as they could for the London smoke, and the romantic centenarian took a glass of wine, when they drank her health and many happy returns. I do not know whether paupers habitually get high on their birthdays; but never, I am sure, was any one so elevated as this flighty and volatile old lady.

THE GIRL OF THE PERIOD.

Miss BRADDON, an authoress who has been considered sensational, has taken up the cause of the Girl of the Period, not so much to defend, as to account for her. It is the fault of the men entirely that there is such a character in English society. English girls never had a thought of doing anything flashy, slangy, or in any way improper in dress, language or behavior, until they saw that the Anonymas were more attractive to their male acquaintances than they were. When they made the sad discovery, they set themselves to meet the enemy with her own weapons. They painted their faces, dyed their hair, mounted infinitesimal hats and bonnets on immense chignons, and dressed in the loudest and most executric fashion. Purely in self-defene they became what they are. It was on the principle of supply and demand, which a nation of shopkeepers ought to appreciate. Women are said to dress for each other—but that is only a matter of competition. They dress for men; as with reference to them, at some portions of their lives they live and move and have their being. And if, as some contend, women are in every country what men require them to be—what they by their own tastes and habits make them—of course Miss BRADDON is right, and the men of England are entirely responsible for the Girl of the Period. A lovely and sensible Yankee girl I met the other day, who has spent several years in foreign travel, consoled her mother, who was lamenting that at her age she was losing the advantages of society, by saying: "I don't see that two or three years of flirting does a girl any good; and as for husbands, they are not found by looking for them."

But who can wonder that women talk slang when you meet it everywhere. A sporting paper is unreadable to one who is not trained to its technicalities. We are getting more and more of it in politics, and every phase of life will soon have its own special dialect. Here is a paragraph, for example, from a Parliamentary letter in an English paper:

"The whip in the Lords against the Scotch Education bill was very severe. Lord ELCHO was almost the only gentleman present on the Opposition benches, and directly he had seen the bill through the Commons, off he posted to get his men together for the Lords. He seemed as eager and excited as if he were the driver of a 'blue' cab at a country borough contest, charged with the duty of helping free and independent blues to the poll. Lord REDESDALE, too, had been dodging about for days, picking up all the stray Peers he could find. The issue was never for a moment in doubt; and a good many of the Liberal members, especially below the gangway, are in no way whatever disappointed."

The same writer gives an account of the way in which the two Houses get prorogued—another pretty ceremony I want you to adopt at Washington, wigs and all, as soon as possible:

"The House had after this nothing more to do, and sat with its hands folded, calmly awaiting its dissolution, for a space of ten minutes or so. Then arose a cry of 'Black Rod,' and the door of the House, according to ancient custom, was slammed in that officer's face by the Sergeant-at-Arms, the meaning of this apparent discourtesy being that the House prohibits the entrance even of a messenger from the Lords until permission shall have been obtained. Black Rod, standing outside, gave three taps with his wand, and the Sergeant-at-Arms, having made due inquiry through the grating as to his credentials, unlocked the door and allowed him to come into the lobby. [Just like a lodge of Freemasons.] The doorkeeper next marched to the bar, and shouted out 'Black Rod,' whereupon this gentleman began his march to the table, halting three times during his journey, and bowing each time with incredible pomp and statelness. Arrived at the table, he delivered his message, which was that the attendance of the House was desired in the House of Lords. He had to go out of the House backwards, for it would have been a breach of privilege if he had shown his posteriors to the Speaker. Walking in this way, especially considering the difficulties of a sword, which is apt to get between one's legs, is not a very easy thing to do, especially when it has to be done ceremonially and in full-dress fashion. However, the door was safely attained, and Mr. Speaker, preceded by the mace, and followed by the members present, went to the Upper House. There they soon returned; and, after a little leave-taking, all was over, and we joyfully went home."

Guiseppe Dolfi—Sketch of the Dead Hero—Duelling—The Kingdom and the Continent—The Season.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Tuesday, Aug. 3, 1869.

During the past week one of the heroes of Florence, and almost of Italy, has closed his career. GIUSEPPE DOLFI for twenty years was an idol of the people, and his influence was legitimately obtained and honestly used. It is the good fortune of this community to have another added to the number of examples of radical reformers who have obtained almost absolute control of the masses, and have not abused their influence, but used it for the promotion of a well-ordered rule. The praise of BEPPE DOLFI, as he was familiarly called, was in the mouth of every artisan and common laborer while he lived, and there was not an honest heart among all the humbler classes but was touched when his sudden death was announced. I saw the late Archbishop of Florence carried to the grave, and I have seen the funeral of a member of the reigning family; and that impressive spectacle, the burial of the poet NICCOLINI; but this pageant of the bearing of the body to burial of the friend of the people, or capo-popolo, as he was called, was the sight best calculated to awaken a new emotion. For the first time, that I remember, the managers of the theatres gave notice that their places of amusement would be closed. By a general impulse great masses of the common classes followed the body to the cemetery on the hill of San Miniato, within the limits of the old ruined fortress which MICHAEL ANGELO planned and defended.

BEPPE DOLFI was a baker, and his respectable fortune was made by that trade. He was an active member of many societies formed to promote the welfare of the population. The good sense shown by this popular leader in the Tuscan revolution of 1859, gave to that event a character of moderation and decorum which revolutionary movements seldom have, and the memory of which has always been agreeable to the inhabitants of Florence. When VICTOR EMANUEL arrived in his new capital, he tried to make DOLFI a cavalier of the Order of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus, so as to bind this powerful agent to the monarchy. But the sturdy Republican refused to be tied to the throne by a ribbon, assuring the King that he would find in him a faithful subject as long as the people were willing to maintain the present system. He had the respect and confidence of GARIBALDI, BERTANI, MAZZINI and GUERRAZZI, and the second and last of these made addresses at his grave. It was a proof of the prevalence of skeptical or even more of irreligious tendencies in Italy, that no priest or prayer was allowed on this occasion of sepulture. The followers of DOLFI are of the class of liberi pensatori; more numerous in Italy than any census will ever be able to report. These are for the most part found among young men and the common people of cities, whose sentiment of patriotism is stronger than their attachment to the dogmas under which they have been trained. They cling with unyielding obstinacy to the belief that Rome and the priests have done more injury to Italy than all other harmful influences combined. They can never forgive the priests that blind adherance to the Papacy which has destroyed in their hearts the sentiment of patriotism, and made them ready to sacrifice the country for the triumph of ecclesiastical rule. This dead leader, DOLFI, was distinguished, as are GARIBALDI and MAZZINI, for a love of country, filial in its tenderness and ready for any sacrifices, and it is this which has united them so completely to the popular heart.

DUELLING.

The practice of duelling in Italy is still kept up, and the frequency of such encounters seems even to increase. Indeed, hardly a week passes but several cases are reported. The recent tobacco contract controversy threatened to furnish a large crop, but up to this time no sword has been drawn or powder burnt on that account. The editor of the Nazione, Signor BRENNA, has made an effort to have a shot with Signor OLIVA, of the Riforma; but technical obstacles are happily in the way. The question is still pending. The Italians do not yet see what a foolish practice this is. Duels here often grow out of the most trivial misunderstandings. Fortunately when the tug of blows comes, the parties contrive not to hit each other, and in the majority of cases no death or incurable wound follow. A few days ago there was an encounter on the peaceful hill of the Mount of Olives, near one of the gates of Florence. First fire at a distance of twenty-five paces—no skin broken. Second trial, distance reduced to sixty feet—like result. The parties then apologize, shake hands, and return to the city together. Such is the logic of duelling.

ITALY AND THE CONTINENT.

Every effort is now made to obliterate, penetrate or overcome the mountain barrier which separates Italy from the Continent. The success of the Fell railroad over Mount Cenis, and the promised opening of the tunnel under the Alps in 1871, has given a great stimulus to new enterprises. The talk now is of having railway communication by the passes of the Simplon, Splugen and St. Gothard. The proximate opening of the Suez Canal has awakened hopes which we are to wait not long to see realized. On these shores a prosperity is to be revived of which the commercial advantages of four or five centuries back are but a feeble symbol. The wealth of Asia is once more to be thrown into the lap of Italy, and Switzerland and Germany are to gain proportionate advantage. The wants of many millions are to be supplied, but we are always to keep in mind that the consumption of twenty millions in Europe is only about equal to that of one-third the number in the United States.

THE SEASON.

As for heat and health, Italy this season has not fallen into any excesses. Not a case of cholera has yet been reported, and the Summer is now so far advanced that there is hope of entire exemption. It is something to be thankful for, at Italy has so often severely suffered from this scourge. ANGELICO.

OUR STATE PRISONS.

Conference of the Prison Inspectors and a Committee of the Prison Association—The Enforcement of Discipline.

From the Albany Argus, Aug. 25.

A Special Committee of the Prison Association and the Inspectors of State Prisons held a conference yesterday in the Senate Chamber, with reference to the manner of enforcing discipline in the State Prisons. There were present State Prison Inspectors Solomon Scheu, David B. McNeil and John Hammond, and the following members of the Special Committee referred to: Professor T.W. Dwight, Chairman; Governor Hoffman, Comptroller Allen, Judge Edmonds, John Stanton Gould, Gaylord B. Hubbell, Dr. Griscom, Dr. E. C. Wines, and Hon. Gideon Haines as a corresponding member. Dr. Wolf, of Clinton, and Agent and Warden Nelson, and Dr. Collins, of Sing Sing, were also present.

Professor DWIGHT stated that this meeting had been called at the suggestion of Dr. WINES, the Corresponding Secretary of the Prison Association, to confer with the prison authorities and prison officers in relation to the present condition of our State Prisons, and called upon Dr. WINES to more fully state the objects of the meeting.

Dr. WINES said that it had been believed that the effect of the law passed last Winter abolishing certain punishments in our State Prisons had something to do with the recent troubles in the State Prisons. Under this impression the Executive Committee of the Prison Association had corresponded with the State Prison Inspectors, asking them if a conference on their part would be acceptable. General HAMMOND, the President of the Board, responded that such a meeting would be very agreeable. A Special Committee was appointed to meet the Inspectors, and the result was this conference. He would not suggest just what course should be pursued now, but thought some organization might be necessary.

Governor HOFFMAN suggested that the conference be conducted informally. He saw no necessity for a formal organization.

Inspectors HAMMOND and MCNEIL, Judges EDMONDS and GOULD concurred in the Governor's suggestion.

The Governor said he would be glad to hear a statement of the condition of the prisons from the officers in charge.

Inspector HAMMOND said he was in charge of the Auburn Prison, and he was free to admit that the discipline was not what it should be, or what it had been in former years. The law abolishing punishment had proved disastrous. The prisoners had the upper hand of the officers in many cases, and acts of insubordination were frequent. The keepers were afraid of their lives. While the prisoner was to be governed by force the law of force was repealed, and there appeared to be no remedy. Solitary confinement in dark cells was now the only resort, and that he believed to be the worst kind of punishment for the convict. He could tell from the bad air in the cell how long a man had been locked up. But the convict did not care for it, and in many cases they preferred to remain in confinement. There must be some mode of punishment or you could not have order. It was the repeal of the law abolishing the mode of punishment that had been the main cause of the recent revolts. The convicts declared that the law was on their side, and that outside sympathy was also with them, and hence they would do as they pleased. When last at Auburn he saw twelve men in solitary confinement, and only one of the twelve asked to be released. He was convinced that some mode of punishment was necessary to prevent results still more disastrous than had yet occurred. There must be rigor somewhere.

Mr. MCNEIL said he was in charge of the Clinton Prison. The discipline there was tolerably good. The locking up mode of punishment was the only obstacle in the way. He was in favor of some sharp, quick, punishment that would not injure the convict, but that would force him to perform his duty. Such means must be had, or there could be no discipline. Convicts were now defiant. They assaulted keepers, and dared them to apply punishment. The prison officers were helpless, and in danger of their lives every hour. Some means must be devised and allowed to compel the convicts to obey the rules.

Inspector SCHEU was in charge of the Sing Sing Prison. He could add but little to what had already been said, but concurred fully in the opinions advanced by his colleagues. There had been revolts at Sing Sing, but he doubted whether they would have occurred if means of punishment had been left to the prison officers. The convicts had said that the meat was bad. But he had examined the whole matter and found the complaint unfounded. The whole trouble arose from the abolition of the law giving power to punish. Order was now restored at Sing Sing, but it had been brought about by almost superhuman exertions.

Mr. NELSON, Agent and Warden at Sing Sing, comburred in what had been said by other gentlemen. There would have been no revolt if the means of punishment had been continued. Within a day after the law was passed abolishing punishment, a degree of uneasiness was manifest among the convicts. The organization of the revolt commenced at that time, and continued to the outbreak. If the shower bath had been continued, the whole affair could have been arrested. But as nothing but the dark cell could be used, the hardened convict cared nothing for it. Another trouble was that there was an insufficient guard at Sing Sing. For instance, there were 350 convicts at the quarry, under three or four guards. It was a wonder that more did not escape. In many cases the convict would relent before placed in the shower bath. Something had been said about hanging convicts on hooks. He had seen a case where a man had been on the hooks for six hours, and would then sing and dance. Solitary confinement was a bad means of punishment, and was not effective. About thirty of the leaders of the late revolt were now in confinement. In answer to a question of Governor HOFFMAN, Mr. NELSON said that the leaders of the late revolt were limited to about thirty.

Inspector MCNEIL and Inspector HAMMOND said that there had been no revolts or outbreaks at Clinton or Auburn. They agreed that there was a worse class of convicts at Sing Sing than at either of the other prisons. They knew nothing of the law abolishing punishment until it was passed.

Judge EDMONDS said the law originated with the complaints made in the newspapers about the shower baths, and the public sympathy was aroused. He was surprised to find that the law took effect immediately after its passage, thus leaving the prison officers helpless. Certainly some time should have been given to devise some other means.

Governor HOFFMAN said he had some doubts about signing the bill, but he was satisfied that public sentiment demanded it, and the sooner the trial was made to govern the better the punishment the better. The extreme object of the law would cure itself, as the result had now shown.

Judge EDMONDS thought the Governor had acted wisely. It now gave an opportunity for comparing views on the subject, and for the adoption of proper means for prison government. He agreed with the Governor that the evil of the law would correct itself, and thus good would be accomplished.

Inspector HAMMOND said the prisoners at Sing Sing were more exposed than at other prisons, as there was no protection wall, as at Auburn and Clinton. It was a wonder that there were not more escapes there on that account.

Mr. HUBBELL spoke at some length with reference to prison discipline in England and Ireland, and with reference to the reformatory processes employed.

Professor DWIGHT followed in favor of reformatory processes as far as possible. As a reward for good behavior, he would allow convicts to converse together.

Dr. COLLINS, of Sing Sing Prison, concurred in the views that had been expressed. He objected to solitary confinement as a means of punishment, on account of its physical effect upon the convicts. He made it a point to inspect the meat given the convicts before and after it was cooked, and all complaints on the subject were unfounded. Thus he knew from actual observation.

Dr. WOLF, of Clinton, condemned the use of the cell as a means of punishment, and that was all the means left by the law. He thought there should be some uniform mode of punishment adopted for all the prisons. Some mode of punishment must be used; it was impossible to get along without it.

Judge EDMONDS called attention to the laws of 1847, which authorize the Inspectors to construct cells. He called upon Comptroller ALLEN for information on the subject.

Comptroller ALLEN said there were no funds in the Treasury for that purpose. In fact, the prisons were now running on borrowed money. The agents and wardens of the prisons did not have the means necessary to make needed improvements, and to properly carry on the institutions under their charge. The Legislature had not provided sufficient means for those purposes, and the consequence was that the prisons were run without law. In consequence of this, the prison officers and the Comptroller were embarrassed. He thought some reforms were needed in the management of our prisons. But he did not see how they could be readily reached. We must take things as they are, and do the best we can.

Mr. HAINES, of Massachusetts, spoke at some length on the general principle of prison discipline and management. He said, in the first place, our prisons should be so constructed that when a man entered within the walls, he would feel that there was no possible means of escape. That was the greatest means to enforce discipline that could be adopted.

Dr. GRISCOM read the following paper:

A PRISON MANAGEMENT PROPOSITION, BY JOHN H. GRISCOM, M. D.

Of the numerous interesting subjects which elicit the attention of nearly all intelligent, virtuous and patriotic people, there cannot be named one more important and essential to the improvement of any class than the reformation of the inmates of prisons, for the prevention of a repetition of their criminality when released from confinement. Their thorough instruction in relation to their sources of happiness, the improvement of their mental and physical condition, and of their social habits, to enable to their fellow creatures, must certainly be regarded as the only reliable basis of their virtues and their happiness in both their present and future lives. The management of prisons is, therefore, one of the most interesting and valuable operations, both governmental and individual.

The physical punishment of prisoners for disobedience of the rules and regulations of the penal institutions to which they have been committed, being the subject under our present consideration, I have a method thereof to propose which I regard as most likely to prevent disobedience therewith, and also to avoid the very lifeless which the methods heretofore employed have undoubtedly produced without improvement in their moral spirits, and with marked injury to their physical condition and occasional loss of life. The use of the cat and the water shower have been very appropriately prevented by the Legislature, and the recently invented method of hanging by the arms should also be abolished, all those plans being both physically and mentally distressing, and intellectually depressive, and consequently having no improving influence whatever.

One of the most fortunate and felicitous means of preventing bad conduct in prison, encouraging the inmates to conduct themselves correctly, and proving to them the advantage of good behavior, is the law which rewards them for it by an abbreviation of their sentences.

The mode of punishment which I now entertain as appropriate is the reverse of that law, viz., that bad conduct and disobedience of the prison rules shall increase the length of sentence in the same proportion as good conduct and obedience now reduces it.

Should such a law be enforced, and the Judge who pronounces a sentence to a convict inform him also of the fact that his good behavior in prison should diminish the time, and that bad conduct would increase it in the same proportion, it would undoubtedly have a very marked influence upon the convict, and determine him immediately respecting his deportment. The privilege of abbreviation of the time of confinement has a well-marked influence upon a great many, and upon those who do not well appreciate it, the reverse idea would, doubtless, increase its influence, also its happy effect upon the moral disposition and good conduct of a large proportion of the inmates.

Another suggestion I have to make is that in case of any prisoner being disposed to improper conduct, and the violation of the prison rules, he should not be subjected to any physical punishment, i. e., whipping, showering or hanging, but that he should be confined alone in a close cell, to be thus wholly excluded from all the others, and be kept there until the Warden or Superintendent is convinced that he has undergone a change of spirit, and that his release would insure good deportment, and the avoidance of any further prolongation of his sentence.

Every such close cell should, however, be well ventilated, kept free from any foul air, and perfectly clean, that the physical and mental health of the occupants may be preserved.

Judge EDMONDS suggested the appointment of a committee to made a thorough examination of the Prisons, and have a report ready on the first meeting of the Legislature. This would save time, and give the Legislature information upon which action could be taken at once. He suggested that the present special committe resign, and that Governor HOFFMAN be requested to appoint a committee of three, which committee should be adopted by the Association. Such a committee would have power to administer oaths and take testimony.

Professor DWIGHT thought there was a common ground upon which the Prison Association and the Inspectors of State Prisons could stand. They could go to the Legislature, and say that certain things are required of prison officers which cannot be carried out. We will ask the Legislature to give us proper prison buildings—such structures as will secure the prisoner. And we will further ask for the adoption of such plans in relation to prison reform as will secure the desired effect.

The conference closed, to be renewed at Sing Sing some time in October. The day is to be fixed by General HAMMOND, President of the Board of Inspectors of State Prisons.

The Executive Committee of the State Temperance Convention.

The Executive Committee of the State Temperance Convention, held recently at Saratoga, met yesterday, pursuant to adjournment, at the rooms of the National Temperance Society, No. 172 William-street, in this City.

The members present were: Hon. JOHN O'DONNELL, of Lowville; W. J. GROO, of Middletown; A. N. LOCKE, of Glenn's Falls; and J. N. STEARNS, B. E. HALE and H. S. MCCOLLUM, of New-York.

The Committee organized by the appointment of J. N. STEARNS as Chairman, and H. S. MCCOLLUM as Secretary.

J. P. HAYES, of Rochester, was appointed a member of the State Committee in place of FREDERICK STARR, resigned.

It was resolved that each member of the State Committee be authorized and directed to secure the organization of county, assembly, town and ward committees within his district where such committees have not already been formed, and that the names of such committees be sent immediately to the Secretary of this Committee in New-York City.

Messrs. STEARNS, HALE and O'DONNELL were appointed a Committee to issue a circular of instructions in relation to the organization of the State.

In the afternoon, the Committee waited upon the Republican Union State Committee, at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, to urge its support of temperance measures throughout the State.

THE WEIGHMASTER'S FRAUDS.

The Case of Colonel Spear—Testimony for the Defence—The Examination Nearly Completed.

The examination into the frauds alleged to have been committed by PERCY B. SPEAR, in the preparation of the pay-rolls while acting as United States Weigher, was resumed yesterday morning.

Henry W. Spinan testified: I was foreman for Spear from the first week in June to July 20; I was generally present when he paid off; memoranda were made out by Spear on the 1st and 8th of July; the men were paid from the memoranda; I paid them the money myself after it was counted out; after July 15

1862, but whose exact address he says has been unknown to him for many years. It appears that he was in the City only six months, and then went to "Kunaticut," where he worked on a railroad for a short time, after which he went to Scotland, where he enlisted in the British Army, in which he has ever since served. This old soldier speaks with simple pathos of the ups and downs of his life and the feeling of loneliness which comes upon him with age, and incites him to search out the wife from whom he has been separated for seventeen years. There is little probability that such inquiries as the Police can make will result in the discovery of the long-lost wife.

THE FENIANS.

Twenty-five Delegates to the Congress in Solemn Convocation—The Struggle for the Funds Recommenced in the Courts.

The brethren of the Order of true Fenians assembled in this City yesterday to hold their eighth annual Congress. The organization was to have been represented by delegates, but the delegates appointed proxies, and a majority of the proxies were absent. The place of meeting was Masonic Hall, in East Thirteenth-street, and the proceedings were conducted in secret. At the outer door stood a valiant Knight of the Legion of St. Patrick who, most of the day, was endeavoring to keep a soldierly position with his musket at support arms. The inner door of the hall was guarded by another warrior of the Legion, whose orders were to admit no one who did not belong to the Circle. The reporter of the City Press applied for admission but were denied. At the close of the day, however, an outline of the proceedings was made public.

Mr. JOHN SAVAGE, Chief Executive, being absent, Mr. JOSEPH PAUL, former Chief, called the Congress to order and addressed the delegates briefly, requesting them to be as expeditious as possible in the deliberations and proceedings. Mr. ANTHONY A. GRIFFIN, Centre of Manhattan, was chosen temporary Chairman, and RICHARD J. MORRISON, of New-York, Secretary. All the delegates present, numbering about twenty-five, were declared duly entitled to seats. Various committees were appointed, and the Convention took a recess until 7 P. M.

The Congress meets to-day again, and Mr. SAVAGE is expected to deliver his annual message before it. Such parts of it as can be published consistently with the public safety will appear in to-morrow's papers.

The Press Committee furnish the following description of the interior of Masonic Hall, as arranged for the Congress: "It is tastefully decorated with the national tricolor flag of Ireland, (green, white and yellow,) and the Stars and Stripes of the Union. In the centre is a beautiful delineation of the Maid of Erin weeping over her ruined harp, the strings of which seem nearly all severed."

Fenian Funds in the Courts.

An injunction has just been granted by the Superior Court, whereby JOHN O'MAHONEY, THOMAS J. BARR and HUGH SMITH are enjoined from parting with certain funds which have been collected for the benefit of the Fenians. The plaintiff in the action is JAMES W. FITZGERALD. The complaint sets forth that there is a large fund, called the "Fenian Fund," and that several hundred thousand dollars of the same were contributed by Irishmen resident in the United States and their descendants; that the funds in question were collected from laborers and servant girls to a large extent, and that Mr. O'MAHONEY was appointed a trustee of these funds; that although a long time has elapsed since he entered upon the duties of his office, he has failed to apply the funds to the uses intended by the contributors, or to account for the same. The plaintiff claims that he has contributed the sum of $5,000, and that a portion of this was deposited with the bankers, Messrs. BELMONT & Co. The complaint concludes with a prayer for an injunction restraining O'MAHONEY and BARR from paying any of the funds except by order of the Court. The injunction order was granted and an investigation will take place at an early day.

BROOKLYN REFORM.

Meeting of the Citizens' Association—Election of Permanent Officers—Proposed Nominating Convention.

An adjourned meeting of the Brooklyn Citizens' Reform Association was held at the City Salesroom, in Court-street, last evening, Ex-Judge MORSE presiding.

The Committee on Officers reported the following names: JAS. SHARKEY, President; MORRIS REYNOLDS, Vice-President; EGBERT CLEAVE, Secretary; STEPHEN CROWELL, Treasurer.

Mr. SHARKEY declined the nomination for President and named Judge MORSE, who also declined. The report of the Committees was adopted except as to the Presidency, which was laid over until another meeting, Judge MORSE having been requested to continue Chairman until a permanent President is elected.

Mr. HENRY HARTEAU then offered the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, It is the purpose and the determination of this Association to nominate such candidates from the different political organizations in this county and City, as will in their opinion best subserve all citizens interested, in an economical and just administration of our public affairs; therefore,

Resolved, That this Association deem it proper to give due notice to the different political committees in said county and City, that they will cause a nominating convention to meet on the second Tuesday in October next, for the purpose of making such selections of candidates for office to be supported at the ensuing election, who have been presented by the different political organizations in said county and City.

Resolved, That all the said different political organizations be requested, and are respectfully invited to cause their Senatorial, Assembly, County, City and Ward nominations to be made prior to the day heretofore named for the assembling of a nominating convention, to be called by the order of the Association.

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to transmit a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions to the Chairman of each of the said political bodies.

After much discussion a vote was taken and the resolutions were tabled.

The following Executive Committee was appointed: James Sharkey, E. D. White, D. D. Whitney, C. J. Shepard, S. F. Whiting, Royal S. Crane, Frances Markey, Henry Harteau, George H. Fisher, J. J. Garrison, Jesse M. Folk, A. Willey, E. Cleave, S. W. Juncke, John H. Brennan.

The following Finance Committee was appointed: Stephen Crowell, John E. Cammeyer, Foster Pettitt, D. F. Fernald, George J. Burnett.

The meeting adjourned until Monday next at 4 o'clock.

Railroad Accident at Yonkers.

The jury impaneled by Coroner SMITH, of Hastings, to investigate the killing of JANE ROBERTS, a girl about 10 years old, who was run over by an express train on the Hudson River Railroad, yesterday rendered a verdict censuring the Railroad Company for not having flagmen stationed at the road crossings in Yonkers, also for running the trains at such a high rate of speed through that village. It was stated before the jury that there were about two thousand persons leaving and going on board of steamers at the time the accident occurred.

Daring Burglary at East New-York.

On Sunday night, the residence of Captain MALONEY, at East New-York, was entered by thieves, who carried away about $600 worth of goods, consisting chiefly of silver ware and linen. Mrs. MALONEY had that evening given a party, at which some forty persons were present, who had vacated the house for an hour, while calling on Father CARROLL. They left the tables set, and everything in complete order, but on returning found things in a very different condition. Every attempt has since been made to apprehend the thief and recover the property, but without success.

Board of Fire Commissioners.

At the meeting of the Fire Commissioners yesterday only Commissioners MYERS, WILSON and GALWAY were present, General SHALER being at Gettysburg, and Mr. MCLEAN detained at home by sickness. The only business done was to refer communications to appropriate committees; among them one to furnish a new kind of rope and wire ladders for fire escapes, and another calling attention to a subterranean method of telegraphic communication which the writer offers to furnish for $100,000.

Probable Murder in Glen Cove.

The murderous assault committed on WILLIAM CARPENTER, of Glen Cove, Queens County, is very likely to terminate fatally to CARPENTER. It will be remembered that CARPENTER was stabbed three times with a dagger—twice in the back and once in the left breast. He was yesterday afternoon reported to be in a dying condition. ROBINSON has been arrested and now lies confined in the Queens County Jail.

Coroners' Cases.

Coroner KEENAN held an inquest yesterday in the case of THOMAS PATTERSON, aged 43, whose death resulted from injuries received nearly six weeks ago by being struck by the hoisting apparatus at the warehouse of H. B. CLAFLIN & CO., in Church-street. A verdict of accidental death was rendered.

The remains of an unknown man, about 40 years of age, were found, yesterday morning, floating in the East River off Pier No. 46. He had dark hair, and was dressed in linen coat, woolen vest and pantaloons, muslin shirt and boots. The remains were removed to the Morgue, and Coroner ROLLINS was notified to hold an inquest.

Yesterday afternoon, CHAS. MALITSKY, a native of Poland, 52 years of age, the proprietor of the lager-beer saloon No. 218 William-street, who had been employed as head waiter at the Elm Park Garden, died at his residence from the effects of a large quantity of arsenic taken with suicidal intent. The deceased, it appeared, had been unfortunate in business, and on Tuesday morning last procured a quantity of arsenic and swallowed it, death ensuing yesterday. Coroner KEENAN was notified to hold an inquest.

Hayes, by which order the plaintiffs were required to show cause why the several injunction orders heretofore issued in this action should not be vacated, and the injunctions therein contained dissolved, and also upon the counter affidavits of James B. Hodgskin, plaintiff, and after hearing Mr. Choate in support of said application and Mr. Wehle in opposition; ordered, That all the injunction orders heretofore made in this action be and the same are hereby vacated, and that the several injunctions in said orders, and each of them contained, be and the same hereby are dissolved with $10 costs to the defendants."

POLICE COURTS.

The Tombs—Hogan, Justice.

DISHONEST MESSENGER.

Yesterday afternoon OSCAR TWAY, a messenger boy employed by the West, Bradley & Cary Manufacturing Company, No. 364 Broadway, was sent with a check for $150, payable to bearer, to draw the money at the Merchants' Exchange National Bank, No. 257 Broadway, and also to make a deposit in the same bank, and in a private banking house of some drafts for collection. His protracted absence led to inquiries, and it being found that he had been in the bank and drawn the money, application was made to the Central Police Office. Detectives Tilley and Tully succeeded in arresting the boy at a late hour in the evening, but he was not found in possession of the money, although he confessed that he had spent $30 of the amount in Brooklyn for clothing. He was arraigned yesterday and committed for trial.

STEALING HARNESS.

Henry Cantfer, a German cartman, was arrested yesterday by Officer McGibney, of the Third Precinct, charged with having stolen a set of harness valued at $60 from the stable of Michael Kennedy, No. 270 Greenwich-street. The accused confessed his guilt and was held for trial.

THE OUT-OF-TOWN BURGLARY.

Chas. Start, Christian Start and Charles Hunt, who had been arrested by Detective Field, of the Fifth Precinct, at No. 434 East Fifteenth-street, and in whose possession was found a quantity of boots and shoes stolen from the store of Millard & Whitman, of North Adams, Mass., were arraigned yesterday, and on complaint of H. J. Willard, held for examination.

Jefferson Market—Ledwith, Justice.

DAYLIGHT BURGLARY.

The family of Joseph Colwell, No. 412 West Twentieth-street, being out of the City, and the house therefore unprotected, it naturally was marked by the burglars for their operations. Early Tuesday evening the neighbors noticed three suspicious men loitering about the premises, and one of them at last going up and trying the front door, information was at once sent to the Sixteenth Precinct Police Station. Officers Beck and Travis were sent to examine into the matter, and upon their arrival found that the burglars had already effected an entrance by forcing open the front basement door. One of the burglars was found and arrested in the rear yard of the house next door, and upon his person was found a spoon, fork and knife which had been stolen from the house. Another of the gang was seen by the officers at the moment of their arrival, looking out of a third-story window, and upon going up after him he took to the roof, and was not captured until after a chase over several roofs and descent to the street through House No. 418. Upon being arraigned the prisoners styled themselves William Green and John Thomas. The first stoutly pleaded not guilty, while the latter was content with saying that he had never been engaged in such an affair before; the one plea was as effective as the other as both prisoners were committed without bail for trial at the General Sessions.

SINGULAR CASE OF LARCENY.

A complaint was made by Wm. D. Woods, No. 1 Great Jones-street, that a roll of cloth valued at $40 was stolen from his store, and he charges the crime upon one Chas. Stephens, in consequence of the statements made to him by Henry Cozzens, a colored man. This witness states that he was informed by Stephens that the store of Woods was open; that he entered it with him, and that Stephens left, carrying a large roll. The accused denied that he had taken anything from the store, but being required to answer, gave bail in the sum of $500 for his appearance at the General Sessions.

THE REDELL OPERATIONS.

An examination was had yesterday in the case of Mott§ Bedell, alias G. M. Lawrence, upon the charge of defrauding the Harlem Bank by means of a worthless check for $300. No new facts of interest were elicited.

Essex Market—Miller, Alderman.

Michael Hogan was held on the charge of threatening to stab Officer Purcell, of the Seventh Ward Police.

Thomas Brady, for abusing Mary Ahern by beating her, committed.

Bridget Lierney was accused of stealing a shawl worth $10. Committed for trial.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 25—P. M.

The Secretary of the Treasury to-day purchased for the Sinking Fund two millions of dollars in United States 5-20 Bonds on terms rather below than above the open market as it stood yesterday, the difference in Interest in Gold being taken into account. This difference is allowed to the seller in Gold as from 1st of May or 1st of July, the date of the last installment of Interest, and settled as a separate transaction. A further purchase of $1,000,000 will be made at noon to-morrow, to complete the total of $10,000,000 for the month of August. The fact that only $3,905,000 was offered to-day, and a good portion of this above the market, caused the market to advance, after the awards were announced, to 121 ⅞ cent. on the 5-20s of 1867, and on other descriptions in proportion. The probability, therefore, is, that the Government will have to pay from ¼ to ½ ⅞ cent. higher for the $1,000,000 wanted to-morrow than the average purchasers to-day.

As an evidence of the ease in Money among the Brokers, it may be stated that less than $100,000 of the 5-20s accepted to-day was carried into the Treasury Office to-day for immediate payment, although the Assistant Treasurer was ready to cash the whole sum if wanted to-day in place of to-morrow. This condition of the Money market, so far as loans on call to the Brokers are concerned, caused an improvement in the Railway speculation, which it will be noted from the closing quotations this afternoon was generally higher than on Tuesday night, and on the Vanderbilt New-York Roads the sales of the day were from 3 to 5 ⅞ cent. better on Central. The Western list also shows an improvement of 1@2 ⅞ cent. Pacific Mail 1@1½ ⅞ cent., and the Southern State Bonds ½@¾ ⅞ cent. advance on Tennessees and Missouris.

The Bonds accepted were divided as follows:

1863	$279,350	1867	$462,650
1864	255,000	1868	800
1865	1,002,200
Total			$2,000,000

The Treasury Office received the large sum of $845,000 for Customs Duties in Gold, today, and also $700,000 in Gold Notes from the Baltimore Office. The Currency balance varied but $270,000 from yesterday. To-morrow it will probably be reduced about $2,000,000, as all the 5-20 Bonds purchased to-day are required to be then delivered.

The speculation upward in Gold was carried from 188 to 188¾ ⅞ cent. to-day, reacting in the Afternoon to 188¼@188⅜@188½ ⅞ cent. The Bull Combination in the Gold Room is said to be a strong one, but thus far there is no apprehension that the movement can be carried very high in the face of abundant Foreign Exchanges below the Specie shipping point. The calculation of the buyers is reported to be in the direction of locking up a large amount of Gold from employment on the Street, favored by the liberal Customs demand and the recent deposits of Gold Coin in the Treasury Office here for San Francisco account. These transfers are permitted to the total of $5,000,000, of which only $2,000,000 thus far have been used. The parties speculating for the rise also presume that no Treasury Gold will be sold for Currency, to be locked up, and that in the September and other Fall purchases of United States 5-20s the Secretary will first exhaust his Currency balances before exchanging any part of his Gold directly for 5-20s. In all this they are probably correct; but the question of a market for the Gold now being bought up "for a turn," remains to be solved. The Importers who have Customs to pay or remittances to make abroad, are not likely to be "cornered," if they do not choose to buy at the advanced rates; so that the only "squeeze" that seems practicable, by locking up or refusing to lend the Cash Gold, must fall upon the Bear speculators in the Gold Room. The public are not particularly interested in the settlement of this class of accounts or "differences" between the opposing parties, except so far as the current price of Gold indirectly contributes to the export movement of Domestic Produce.

There is a fair business doing in the Foreign Exchanges, the purchases of the Import trade being the result of the cheap purchases of Gold on Saturday and Monday last between 187@187¼ ⅞ cent. The rate on London, 60 days, Standard Bankers, is 109¼ ⅞ cent. The Exports of Domestic Produce from New-York for the week past amount to $5,500,000 Currency values, equal to about £800,000 Sterling Exchange.

At the close of the day's business the following quotations were made as compared with Tuesday night. The Stock market, with the exception of the Public Funds, left off dull. The Gold market resumed a firm tone. Fort Wayne is quoted 88½ after the 71 ⅞ cent. Scrip Division.

The London Times, in its crop report, states that the harvest is within thirty per cent. of the average, and, with the continuance of the present favorable weather, it may still improve. All the crops, except wheat, are luxuriant.

The report of the Committee on the Senatus Consultum was read in the French Senate yesterday. The principal modifications made by the Committee are that the Senate may reject a law without giving reasons; and that the Government, on demanding that ordres de jour motivés (i. e., votes of confidence, or want of confidence) be referred to the bureau, may appoint a commission to report upon them.

In the case of W. S. KIMBALL, tobacco manufacturer, of Rochester, N. Y., charged with rendering false returns to the Revenue Department, the United States Court at Buffalo has decided in favor of the Government. The tobacco, machinery, &c., valued at $20,000, which has been seized and bonded by the Government, is thus forfeited. The frauds were discovered in 1867, through the disclosures of a confederate tobacco inspector, who, it is alleged, received several thousand dollars from KIMBALL. His confession of the fraud was made to the then Collector of Internal Revenue, S. P. ALLEN, Esq., on the 6th day of November, 1867, and the seizure was made on the following day.

A Mrs. BIGELOW, of Albany, died on Sunday night from the effects of fright received a few weeks ago, by an incorrect report that her son had been killed in the anti-rent riots at Greenbush. Upon learning the falsity of the report she partially recovered, under the treatment of Dr. O'LEARY, but she suffered a relapse and died a day or two since from the effects of the nervous shock, which affected her heart.

The Agricultural Department's report for August states that the probabilities are that the corn crop will fall considerably below that of last year, and that the cotton crop will be as large, if not larger, than that of 1868. The details of the report were given in the TIMES of Tuesday.

Is Repudiation an Article of Faith with the Democratic Party?

The World, with a sensitiveness which we respect and a mode of exhibiting it which we do not respect, takes us to task for saying that the late Democratic candidate for the Presidency and the recently nominated Democratic candidate for Governor in Ohio had countenanced repudiation. It gives us great pleasure to find so important an exponent of Democratic sentiment as the World restless under this imputation, and we should be but too happy to be put in possession of the evidence upon which the World presumes to characterize our statements upon that subject in language which would have lost none of its force by being respectful.

We submit to the World that the attitude of Messrs. PENDLETON and SEYMOUR, and of the Democratic Party generally, is a matter to be determined by the record, not by invective.

The facts of the case as we suppose, are familiar to the public and indisputable. Mr. PENDLETON was the first conspicuous member of his party who advocated the payment of the bonds in greenbacks. The Government and the country hold that the Five-twenties are payable in gold. They were put upon the market with that understanding, and have been bought and sold as promises to pay gold. Mr. PENDLETON insists that that they shall be paid in a currency which is depreciated,—so violating the contract and robbing the creditors of a portion of their due. We call this repudiation. People generally call it repudiation. Will the World suggest a more appropriate or more truthful term?

Mr. PENDLETON'S friends came in an organized body to the New-York (Presidential) Convention with the view of forcing his nomination as "the greenback candidate." Although they failed to control the nomination they compelled the Convention to engraft his distinctive views and purposes upon its declaration of policy. They dictated what was everywhere accepted as a "Pendleton platform." These were the financial and fiscal resolutions:

"Payment of the public debt of the United States as rapidly as practicable; all moneys drawn from the people by taxation, except so much as is requisite for the necessities of the Government, economically administered, being honestly applied to such payment, and where the obligations of the Government do not expressly state upon their face, or the law under which they were issued does not provide that they shall be paid in coin, they ought, in right and in justice, to be paid in the lawful money of the United States.

Equal taxation of every species of property, according to its real value, including Government bonds and other public securities.

One currency for the Government and the people, the laborer and the officeholder, the pensioner and the soldier, the producer and the bondholder."

So far as we know, these resolutions are susceptible of but one interpretation. They favor the imposition of State taxation upon the Government bonds, and the redemption of the latter in greenbacks instead of gold, in defiance of contract obligations to the contrary. To us, this policy is the equivalent of repudiation, if it is not repudiation. Will the World give it a more acceptable name from its expurgated vocabulary?

But did Mr. SEYMOUR countenance repudiation? The World says he did not. Now let us see.

In accepting the nomination, Mr. SEYMOUR thus referred to the resolutions adopted by the Convection:

"As the presiding officer of that Convention, I am familiar with their scope and import; as one of its members I am a party to their terms. They are in accord with my views, and I stand upon them in the contest upon which we are now entering, and I shall strive to carry them out in future, wherever I may be placed, in political or private life."

We do not forget that before the Convention assembled the same Mr. SEYMOUR had urged upon the New-York Democracy the folly and danger of tampering with the public credit. On that occasion he assumed a decided anti-Pendleton attitude. But though he and his friends prevented the nomination of PENDLETON, they could not prevent the incorporation of the Pendleton programme into the resolutions; and Mr. SEYMOUR, in his haste to be President, lent himself to the policy of the repudiators. "Their views," he said, he will "strive to carry out," whether "in political or private life." Governor SEYMOUR knows the meaning of words, and he meant what he said. We contend, therefore, that he does countenance repudiation. Perhaps the World can suggest a less offensive term that will fully express the same idea.

It is possible that our contemporary takes refuge behind the resolution adopted by the Ohio Democracy a few weeks ago, on which resolution Mr. PENDLETON, as candidate for Governor, at this moment stands. Here it is:

"That the claim of the bondholders that the bonds which were bought with greenbacks and the principal of which is by law payable in currency, should nevertheless be paid in gold, is unjust and extortionate, and, if persisted in, will inevitably force upon the people the question of repudiation."

This is a mere begging of the question. The principal of the Five-twenties—the bonds which form the marrow of the controversy—is not "by law payable in currency." They were issued and bought with a distinct assurance by the Treasury Department that they are payable in gold. To pay in greenbacks what is lawfully payable in gold is repudiation to the extent of the difference in value between coin and currency. We will use another word if the World will supply one equally precise and just.

In spite of the exceptionable manner in which it is expressed, we rejoice that the World is so earnest in its desire to protect its party from the dishonor of repudiation. No party, no public man can long prosper under such an imputation. But it is not enough for the World to proclaim the innocence of its friends to make them innocent. There are facts to be cleared away—a record to be purged and declarations to be obliterated. And until the World fulfills this part of its task, we must continue to say that "Mr. PENDLETON and Governor SEYMOUR countenance repudiation," and that that issue was accepted by the National Democratic Party at the July Convention last year.

—We are sorry that anything found in these columns should have betrayed the World into a professional indecorum which belongs to an order of journalism with which that print should not permit itself to be confounded. If it is disorderly in parliamentary session to call a member by name, it is equally or more disorderly and indecorous for a journalist gratuitously to violate the editorial impersonality.

In these columns we know the World newspaper, but, in discussing its opinions, we do not feel that we are at liberty to go behind the sheet in which they are printed, to the writers who give them utterance unless signed with their names.

We trust we do the World no more than justice in supposing it incapable of deliberately disregarding a professional propriety so essential to the influence and dignity of the Press.

Mr. Burlingame's Mission in Peril.

The telegraph brings us from China intelligence for which we were partially prepared; that the intrigues of the English and French Governments to defeat the negotiations with which Mr. BURLINGAME was charged about two years ago, for placing the Chinese upon the footing of other civilized States in the family of nations, had been, at least, partially successful. The Pekin Government, we are told, has refused to ratify the treaty negotiated last year by the Chinese Embassy with the United States. We doubt whether this statement is true in its length and breadth, or that the treaty has been finally refused ratification on its merits, though that does not diminish the mortification we feel that our own diplomatic agent at Pekin should have been openly engaged in trying to defeat a treaty which had been negotiated by his own Government. It was through apprehension of some infidelity of this sort that Mr. BROWNE was recalled by the President at a very early stage of his admin istration and Senator HOWARD was appointed in his place. Unhappily, the Senator did not accept the position, and BROWNE was allowed to remain. We suppose, though of this we cannot speak with confidence, that Mr. BROWNE shares the prejudices of a large class in California against the Chinese, and has chosen to represent that class rather than the Government from which he received his commission.

The following paragraph, from a timely article in the Evening Mail of yesterday throws some further light upon the telegram which has provoked these comments:

"Mr. BURLINGAME, with his ratified treaty and the 'God speed' of the American people, left our shores for England. General GRANT laid down his commission as military ruler over a small army and a few States, and assumed the duties of President of the United States. Among the things that first absorbed his attention was the Missions to Mexico and China. It was not long after the new President's inauguration that an extract of a private letter from Minister BROWNE, dated at Pekin, was published. It asserted that he (BROWNE) had discovered that the people of China were opposed to the mission and policy of Mr. BURLINGAME, &c. This was deemed at Washington a very extraordinary statement to come from a man who had been intrusted with such important diplomatic functions. It was absurd to suppose for a moment that Mr. BROWNE had seen enough of that great Empire to enable him to form anything like a correct idea of the opinions of five hundred millions of people on any subject, much less one relating to the policy of Mr. BURLINGAME, of which the people of that country at that time were in entire ignorance. It was evident that Mr. BROWNE, and his friends who accompanied him for business purposes, (Mr. POSTON, formerly delegate from Arizona to Congress, and others,) had fallen into the hands of the English and French merchants whose special business it is to disintegrate China, cut it up into provinces for their own selfish purposes, and thus destroy the Imperial Central Government, the very things which Mr. Burlingame is now trying to prevent in his treaties with the Great Powers.

President GRANT, upon seeing the published statement of Mr. BROWNE, was quite indignant, as the reader may imagine, and did not hesitate to express himself freely on the subject, regretting the imprudence of Mr. BROWNE in permitting himself to write private letters to any one about matters of diplomatic concern, and especially on so important a subject, at such a time. The President recollected his promise to Mr. BURLINGAME. He also knew that Mr. BROWNE'S letter would be quoted all over Europe, to the disparagement of Mr. BURLINGAME'S undertaking. The President resolved to act, and accordingly he appointed Mr. HOWARD."

The writer then goes on to say that Mr. HOWARD was induced, by tempting offers from a railway company, to decline the mission, and then adds:

"About this time, only a few weeks since, the President had received some explanation relative to Minister BROWNE'S objectionable letter, which somewhat relieved that gentleman of the responsibility of its publication, and I have reason to believe that it was the purpose of the President, since the declination of Mr. HOWARD, to continue Mr. BROWNE as Minister to China."

We presume that if the President did come to any such conclusion, he will not be long in abandoning it. On the other hand, should it prove true that the treaty has failed to secure the approval of the Chinese Government, Mr. BURLINGAME'S career as its diplomatic representative will be soon brought to a close.

Our Schools.

The new school year is opening, and millions of children scattered during the Summer vacation will very soon reassemble for instruction. It is, therefore, a fit moment for pointing out some of the possible improvements in our educational system.

We aim to cram too many studies into too brief a space; to teach a multiplicity of branches in time adequate for very few; to give a smattering of everything in place of a sound knowledge of anything. There is especially a growing tendency to exchange what once deserved to be called "a good common-school education" for a premature vault into "ologies" without number and "onomies" without end. As a consequence, boys and girls are pushed into the depths of recondite science who hardly know how to spell, and daily with metaphysics before learning the names of the capital cities of their native State.

But this is rarely the fault of our teachers—they understand and lament the mistake. It is the fault of a public sentiment, which ought to be reformed. In our growing country the need, the value and the opportunities of educated young men and young women are so great as to attract them early from school. Instead of remaining as long dependent on relatives and friends as in other countries, they have temptations to become independent before the groundwork of their education is laid. The demand of public sentiment is to crowd the educational work of six years into three, and of ten years into five. This is a sentiment which teachers, in most cases, are forced to respect, but it is at the expense of sound and thorough education.

The lavish supply of money to school children is another general error. It induces an unbecoming extravagance in dress, which is prejudicial to school discipline; it distracts the attention of pupils; and it awakens unworthy rivalries and jealousies. So far has this matter gone, that we should hail with satisfaction, as a move in the right direction, a custom of uniforming pupils according to the practice in many European schools. Or, at least, let gay and flaunting colors in dress and extravagant ornaments be prohibited, and a moderate and becoming style of garments and decoration be prescribed.

The habit of lavishing spending money on children at school is so distinctively a national trait of ours that, in some European schools, pupils from America will not be admitted on that account. Sometimes, with us, unwise fathers and mothers encourage their children to advertise the parental wealth by vulgar display and sensational extravagance. Of course, the poorer scholars are discontented, those of moderate means contract habits of extravagance, the rich become supercilious, the standard of money displaces the standard of intellect or industry, and discipline is at an end.

We do not say that there are no exceptions to the rule—there most certainly are; but we speak now of tendencies, and of defects which demand reform. And we repeat that the fault lies usually not in teachers, but in a vicious or reckless public sentiment—to which latter, therefore, we appeal for correction of these flagrant errors. We are wont to say, and with truth, that popular education lies at the basis of all public prosperity and social and civic virtue; all the more reason, therefore, for making that education solid and substantial.

Railway Consolidations.

Some of our Philadelphia contemporaries are noticing at much length, and with evident exultation, the recent movements of the Pennsylvania Railway Corporation for the trade and travel of the West. The perpetual lease of the Fort Wayne, recently concluded, practically constitutes Philadelphia and Chicago the termini of the Pennsylvania Road. Following this are new or revised passenger arrangements with the Camden and Amboy and New-Jersey Roads to expedite travel from the West to New-York. The train from Chicago and Cincinnati, that now arrives at the suburbs of Philadelphia, west of the Schuylkill River, (known as the Mantua Station,) at 3:05 A. M., will hereafter arrive at 8:05 P. M., and passengers will be in New-York at 11:30 P. M., in place of 6:44 A. M. as at present. The saving of time is seven hours and fourteen minutes, to accomplish which the Pennsylvania and its Fort Wayne section from Pittsburg to Chicago, and also the Camden and Amboy, will increase their express speed. The new arrangement, besides accommodating the present Western travel and diverting via Philadelphia a portion of the travel from the Lake routes, will be, according to the North American, a signal convenience to the business men of that City in making their New-York trips after the hours of business are over. Going West, the train leaving New-York at 5 P. M. will arrive at Mantua at 8 P. M., and reach Chicago the following night at 11:30 P. M.

So much for the Western travel. For freight, as well as a second and more direct route of travel from New-York, the Pennsylvania Company propose a junction of the New-Jersey Central with their own road and its Fort Wayne extension, and the Chicago and Rock Island, making a through line to Omaha, the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific Road. This arrangement has frequently been talked of in Wall-street, but this is the first avowal of the alliance beyond Chicago which we have seen from the headquarters of the Pennsylvania corporation. That it is entirely practicable we have little doubt, and that no more direct line across the rich prairies of Illinois and Iowa than the Rock Island could be secured, is equally probable. The Ledger appears to deem it essential as against the rumored alliance of the New-York Vanderbilt Roads with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern and the Chicago and Northwest Roads. But our neighbor will probably have learned within the last day or two that there is serious doubt as to whether this programme will be carried out.

The Buffalo Commercial intimates that the consolidation of last week between the Lake Shore and Michigan and the Toledo and Wabash Roads stops all broad-guage extensions Westward, with the assent of the Erie Ring, who are placated with the promise of business over their line and a third rail, (in the future,) from Buffalo to New-York. We are not advised as to the correctness of either of these conclusions.

After all, however, our Philadelphia and Buffalo friends may possibly overestimate the value of these consolidations and alliances to the holders of railway property, whatever may be the effect upon the interests of their respective cities in the way of Western trade and travel. We may agree with the Ledger that "the expense and evils of a variety of managing Boards will be avoided," and the public may have "greater regularity and less changing of cars," but not "uniform rates of fares," much less of freights. The last few weeks have demonstrated that the interests of the owners of these great properties are wholly ignored; and the merchants and forwarders to and from the West, in the midst of a season of activity of trade which promised remunerating profits to all interests, are thrown into doubt and confusion as to rates of business over the rival routes. Competition, always keen, was never so reckless or ruinous as now.

Nocturnal Noises.

The conditions under which life is carried on in great cities are constantly becoming harder. Not only is the competition among men more eager and keen than it used to be, but the pressure of business is so great that there never seems to be a time when the bustle and confusion absolutely cease. The day ought to be more than twenty-four hours long to suit our modern requirements. The stress and strain which are placed upon the vital powers are consequently of the most severe kind, and it is owing to this in a great measure that nervous diseases are so much more common and serious than in the days when men recognized the law that there was a time to work and a time to rest. Medical and sanitary science have reduced our liability to certain forms of disease, which used to periodically decimate towns and villages; but brain disorders and affections of the nervous system afflict an increasing number of the human species every year. Strong men break down suddenly from overtaxing their powers. We begrudge ourselves the interval of repose which nature insists upon exacting. "The great difficulty of my practice," said an eminent physician of this City the other day, "is to induce people with brains not to use them." But this is not the whole of the difficulty. When we wish to sleep, our fellow-men will not permit us. As soon as the over-tired head is laid upon the pillow, the night variety of street noises banish sleep, and the next day has to be commenced with jaded spirits and unstrung nerves.

If this were absolutely essential to the business of life, we would only regret the fact, and reconcile ourselves to one more cross in our lot. But the infliction is, in reality, superfluous. No one can pretend that the people who will go home late at night, and drink too much before starting, and then make night hideous by singing and shouting, are indispensable to our prosperity as a community. Strong drink has, apparently, a tendency to develop the vocal powers, but if a man feels an irresistible impulse to sing "Up in a Balloon," or any other of the imbecile productions of the concert-room, why not do it in his own room? Why not, indeed, make him do it there, or in the lock-up? It is useless to remonstrate with these midnight revelers. They would not be in the least affected by the suggestion that in the room under which they are shouting their wild buffoonery a child may be at the point of death, or a delicate woman may be striving to gain the sleep which means renewed life to her. "Sleep eight hours through, if you can," the doctor has said to her just before leaving. But the bar-rooms turn their miserable devotees into the streets, and chaos seems "come again." What do these brawlers care for a human life trembling in the balance—for a dying child or sorrowing parents?—and, alas! sickness and sorrow are the commonest of all incidents in the midst of a population such as ours.

It is quite possible to defend quiet citizens against outrages of this description. In England, where some attention has lately been given to the subject, it has been proposed to interpose, by special legislation if need be, in favor of the peaceful section of society. With us, it might be sufficient if the Police exercised the powers they already possess. We are far from detracting from the services of a force anxious, no doubt, to do its duty, and having a very difficult work to perform. But the Police could certainly do more to prevent nocturnal noises than they have yet thought necessary. Above all, they might avoid contributing to such noises themselves. At present they have a barbarous method of giving friendly signals to each other. First there comes a prolonged and shrill whistle, and then a loud beating of clubs, as if a fire had broken out, or some officer stood in urgent need of assistance. It turns out to be nothing but an interchange of compliments. Might not the Police force dispense with this custom? The fire bell is another disturber of the night. The contrivance was well enough in days when communities were small, and the help of all the neighbors was required to "extinguish a conflagration," as the reporters grandly say. But in 1869 there is such an appliance in existence as the electric telegraph, and in every civilized country but this it is used for calling out the fire engines. The fire bell only answers the purpose here of calling unruly crowds together, and scaring honest citizens out of their sleep.

A perfect municipal government would relieve us from these evils, even if it could not put an end to that heavy traffic which goes on at night on some of the principal avenues, crashing incessantly through the streets, with tinkling of bells and cries of drivers, and occasionally a volley of oaths at some one who will get in the way. This is, perhaps, one of the unavoidable inconveniences of giving railways running powers through a city. We will not ask for great reforms. We plead only for those reasonable regulations which the Police with scarcely any trouble to themselves might enforce. We plead for sleep, "sleep that knits up the ravelled sleeve of care"—and there is not a busy man or woman in the whole City who would not be grateful to the authorities for assisting them to this boon. We cannot alter the main circumstances under which the struggle for bread has to be carried on. But it is quite practicable to make some obvious distinction between the night and the day, and to put an end to noises which are made in mere wantonness, stupidity, or obstinate adherence to old customs.

The Next Republican State Convention.

On the 24th day of September next the Union Republican electors of the State of New-York will meet at Syracuse for the purpose of nominating a Secretary of State in place of HOMER A. NELSON, a Comptroller in place of WILLIAM F. ALLEN, a Treasurer in place of WHEELER H. BRISTOL, an Attorney-General in place of MARSHALL B. CHAMPLAIN, a State Engineer and Surveyor in place of VAN RENSSELAER RICHMOND, and two Judges for the Court of Appeals, in place of CHARLES G. MASON and LEWIS B. WOODRUFF. All of the officers whose places are to be filled are Democrats, except the Judges of the Court of Appeals. They are Republicans, and were appointed by Governor FENTON to fill vacancies caused by the death of WILLIAM G. WRIGHT and the resignation of JOHN K. PORTER.

The call for the Convention, which appears elsewhere in our columns, designates the number of delegates that each Assembly District will be entitled to send, from which it will be seen that the Convention will consist of 412 members—a very large body. The time between the Convention and election is only about six weeks, but sufficient, we apprehend, to inaugurate a vigorous, and, may we not hope, a successful canvass. If an earnest effort is to be made to redeem the State, let our friends send their very ablest and best men to this Convention.

The young, gallant and progressive State of Kansas is developing the elements of intellectual power as rapidly as those of material wealth. There are already in the State seven "Colleges" and "Universities"—one each at Lawrence, Manhattan, Baldwin City, Topeka, Irving, Ottawa and Lecompton; and, besides these, there are a number of other colleges projected. In some of these "Universities," everything is taught, from the alphabet to Euclid, from "making strokes" to ontology. We necessarily admire grandiose institutions of this kind—in Kansas, but still we are inclined to agree with the Leavenworth Times, that one rich and well-supported seat of learning in the State would be better than them all.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS will confer a benefit upon the country, as well as upon the Democratic Party, if he can induce the managers of the latter to accept reconstruction—universal suffrage and all—as an accomplished fact, and one which should not be made the subject of further controversy. "It has passed from the realm of debatable questions," he says, "and should now be classed in the category of facts." "There is no way short of revolution by which it can be reversed" for years, he tells those who have nominated him; and we hope that Democrats generally will acquiesce in his opinion. They have battled over dead issues long enough.

The Governor-General of the New Dominion has taken the trouble to explain how he had been wrongly reported as saying that the people of Canada might possibly desire to "change their allegiance." He repels the charge that he had made use of such language, and shows that what he referred to was the possibility of Canada wishing some other "form of alliance,"—meaning alliance with England. He does not indicate, however, the nature of the possible change in the form of the Anglo-Canadian alliance; but merely says that the English Government will be guided in the matter by the desires of the colonists themselves. We suppose Sir JOHN YOUNG "understood himself" when speaking in this way.

Immediately after the adjournment of the National Labor Congress at Philadelphia, we have the opening of the Massachusetts State Labor Convention at Boston. It is but a short time since the Labor Convention of this State was in session, and we hear of preparations for similar Conventions in other States. We are glad to see a number of men of sound sense and intelligence are making their appearance in these bodies.

It never rains but it pours. Another Atlantic Cable, to unite the United States with Prussia, is projected. The terms of the concession from the Prussian Government will be found at length in another column. It is to be begun by September, and must be finished within two years. We welcome the new enterprise. If we are to have cables at all, let us have enough of them to give all classes a chance to use them.

Grant's Despotism.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Aug. 23, 1869

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In reading to-day an editorial in your journal, entitled "Grant's Despotism," you declare that the President has in "no way interfered with the constitutional order of things."

Will you be good enough to explain by what right or reason he wrote to Marshal BARLOW, telling him to hold the prisoner, J. H. PRATT, at all hazards? It seems to me that his interference was illegal and entirely uncalled for; that the Courts were the resort of the Government, and that he set a precedent never before attempted by any Administration. Yours,

CHAS. FLEMING.

Comments.

We presume the writer of the foregoing note addresses us in good faith for information, and as he may represent a class who have been misled by the misrepresentations of journals hostile to the Administration, we have pleasure in giving him what we trust he will consider a satisfactory reply.

We cannot explain why "the President wrote to Marshal BARLOW telling him to hold the prisoner, J. H. PRATT, at all hazards," for this all-sufficient reason, that the President never wrote any such letter, never gave any such order, and probably never dreamed in his life of treating any legally-constituted authority with disrespect.

Upon our application the United States Marshal has been good enough to oblige us with a copy of the note which he received from the President on this subject, and we print to show how completely groundless were imputations by which hundreds like Mr. FLEMING have been mialed.

[Copy.]
NEW-YORK, Aug. 12, 1869.

General F. C. Barlow, United States Marshal, Southern District New-York:

GENERAL: Learning from the District-Attorney of the Southern District of New-York that Judge J. H. MCCUNN, New-York Superior Court, has ordered the discharge of a United States prisoner, held by you, for the United States, I authorize and direct that you hold said prisoner against all orders of said Judge MCCUNN, and that the prisoner only be released on the order of a Judge or other authority having power to direct a United States Marshal.

You are authorized to use all legal means to retain said prisoner, and to prevent your own arrest by such authority of State Courts.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) U. S. GRANT.

It will be observed that this is simply an order which, but for the circumstance that the President was by chance in town, would have come through the War Department, and simply invests the Marshal with authority to resist any attempt of local Magistrates forcibly to take out of his control a man who was held under a warrant from a Magistrate of the United States.

We presume that nothing was more clear than the President's right to issue such an order, except, perhaps, his duty to do it. Our correspondent is right in supposing that the Courts were the resort of the Government, and it was to prevent the prisoner being taken illegally out of the control of the Courts, that the President saw fit to strengthen the hands of one of the officers of the Court having jurisdiction of the case.

LETERARY GOSSIP.

The materials for a "sensation book" have just been discovered in the private diary kept by Lord PALMERSTON. It is said to be very copious, and to contain sketches and recollections of all the chief personages with whom the noble Lord had been thrown into contact during his unusually long life. The announcement will be received with dread by many of the veteran statesman's friends for he had a way of finding out the weak side of a man's character, and a droll trick of revealing it, which made him a terror to those placed themselves in his way. If Lord PALMERSTON has recorded his impressions of events, as well as his opinions of men, his diary must necessarily possess great historical importance. What revelations he could make, for instance, concerning that memorable "bed-chamber" intrigue which once induced him to resign office! Perhaps few living men could tell us more respecting the actual relations which exist between the Crown and the Ministry in England, for Lord PALMERSTON held office at a troubled time, and he was not always a favorite at Court. He may also have left some records of his experiences with journalists, enlarging the confidences which he once had with the House of Commons when a certain editor was bitterly attacked for having been seen in Lord PALMERSTON'S house. "I am proud to say that I do know him," said Lord PALMERSTON in reply, "and what is more, he is one of the pleasantest and best informed men I have ever met." PALMERSTON knew everybody, and his diary would be a personal history of England from the beginning of the century down to the time he died. We apprehend, however, that there will be sufficient personal influences at work to prevent its publication, at least in this generation.

The Indian Government has commissioned Mr. W. W. HUNTER, of the Civil Service, to prepare a new Gazeteer of India. Such a work was much needed. The present Gazeteer of India (THORNTON'S) being rather out of date, and not satisfactory in many important features. Mr. HUNTER is a young man who one day found out that a number of valuable papers lay buried in the official archives of his department. He studied them patiently, and suddenly achieved distinction by writing a book called Annals of Rural Bengal, in which he brought together information respecting the social life of the Bengalees new to the oldest Anglo-Indian. Since then he has been kept employed by the Government upon literary work. The new Gazeteer will be a book of great value to all who are interested in the Eastern Empire of England.

A London correspondent of a contemporary frequently indulges in comments of a peculiarly ill-natured character on the Pall Mall Gazette. A little while ago it was represented as the organ of a party in England which was anxious to make war with the United States. This absurdity being exposed in the Pall Mall, other groundless charges are constantly brought forward against the paper. Even its circulation is ridiculously misrepresented. The Pall Mall may not be always right, but its comments on American affairs are generally more liberal, just, and better informed than those of most English journals. It has gained the confidence of most Americans who read it regularly; but there are very good reasons why it should fail to please the correspondent who denounces it. It is true, however, as the writer says, that the Morning Star, a Radical daily paper in London, has recently passed into hands capable of giving to it the character and position which should belong to the leading exponent of Radical politics in England. Mr. JOHN MORLEY, the new editor, is an accomplished gentleman, one of the ablest writers of the day, and a man to whom journalism is as a sort of sixth sense. He has collected an efficient staff, and will doubtless give the Star new power and position.

Every one who cares for the best interests of literature will be well satisfied to learn that the Athenæum (London) has at length passed from the control of Mr. W. HEPWORTH DIXON. It had acquired an unhappy notoriety for gross injustice to authors, especially to such authors as dared to write on subjects already appropriated by Mr. DIXON. It was habitually censorious and unjust. The Athenæum suffered in consequence, and Mr. DIXON'S retirement has long been anticipated. The new editor is to be Sir CHARLES DILKE, the proprietor of the paper, and member for Chelsea in the House of Commons. He is the author of the work, Greater Britain, published last year, and although a young man has already made a favorable impression.

GUSTAVE DORE has just completed a series of sketches in London, comprising scenes from fashionable and unfashionable life. He began at Wapping, the resort of sailors, "pimps," and the lowest of the low, and ended in the "court suburb" of Kensington. We venture to say that he discovered some new and powerful subjects for his pencil. The amount of work performed by DORE is not more wonderful than the fact that he contrives to do any at all. His rooms are always crowded with visitors, day and night, and yet the young man has turned out pictures enough to justify the supposition that he must be at least 70 years of age, instead of 37. His London sketches are intended to illustrate a new work by Mr. BLANCHARD JERROLD, the son of DOUGLAS JERROLD, a man well qualified to portray life in the metropolis which he has so frequently explored.

AMERICA AND GERMANY.

Proposed Cable to Connect North Germany with the United States.

Grant of a Concession by Bismarck—Its Provisions—The Work to be Begun at Once.

A concession for laying a new Atlantic cable, between Germany and this country, has been granted by the Chancellor of the North German Confederation, Count BISMARCK, to Count OSCAR REICHENBACH, Dr. ADOLPH LASARD, both at Berlin, JAMES LYSTER O'BRIEN, M. P., and J. GEORGE COOK, at London. It is dated March 12, 1869; provides for the laying of a submarine cable between Northern Germany and the United States; the landing of that cable at a suitable point of the North German North Sea coast, and the construction of all appliances required for using the cable within a telegraph station to be erected near the place of the landing. It is subject to the following stipulations:

The Chancellor of the North German Confederation reserves himself the right of selecting the spot at which the cable is to be landed and connected with the telegraph lines of Northern Germany. He will, in return, make the arrangements necessary for guarding against the cable being maliciously damaged, and for protecting it against injuries from vessels or fishing boats. The incorporators may lay the cable direct and without touching any other territory, or eventually via England and Newfoundland, to any point between New-York and Boston. They also have the option whether they will lay a new cable, or, in order to establish a connection, buy any submarine cables already existing. In the latter case the Chancellor reserves himself the right, before the purchase of the respective cable, to cause the same to be examined as to its working capacity as well as to the risks it may be exposed to, and to prohibit its purchase if found necessary. The concessionaries are permitted to enter into connection with the Indo-European Telegraph Company for the interchange of telegrams between America and Asia or Australia.

The Chancellor of the North German Confederation will promulgate the regulations regarding the transmittance and the exchange of cable telegrams. Telegraph officials of the North German Bund will be employed at the landing station, in order to deliver the telegrams coming from the interior to the officials of the concessionaries, and to transmit the telegrams sent over the cable to their addresses. For the connection with the telegraph lines of the interior, and especially for direct lines to Hamburg, Bremen and Berlin, the North German Bund will make arrangements; about the telegrams, destined from India via England to America, the concessionaries have, however, to come to an understanding with the Indo-European Company. The telegraphic communication is subject to the rules laid down by the International Telegraphic Convention at Vienna, (July 21, 1868,) and to any further alterations through international conventions. For the transmittance of telegrams over this cable, however, no higher rate shall be charged than that charged on any other Transatlantic cable. Government dispatches of the Presidency of the North German Confederation have the preference before other dispatches.

The cable is to be constructed after the best known method, and its construction is to be commenced within six months after the date of the concession, and the whole line is to be completed within two years after that date. If the increasing traffic should demand it, or if the cable should get out of working order, a new cable is to be laid within eighteen months after the Chancellor of the Bund shall have so directed. An interruption of two years in working the cable shall cause the concession to become null and void. The incorporators shall make a deposit of $100,000, and within six months thereafter show subscriptions for the cable to the amount of 9,000,000 Prussian thalers, which capital may be raised to 12,000,000 thalers. The value of cables already laid and purchased from other companies may be deducted therefrom. The concession expires after the elapse of twenty-five years, unless a new agreement is entered into as regards the same. Any differences of opinions between the Chancellor of the North German Bund and the incorporators shall be decided by an arbitrament of three Judges to be nominated for that purpose from the civil department of the Prussian Supreme Court.

In Northern Germany the telegraphs are under the direct control of the Government. An agreement concluded between the North German Government and a cable company, as to the laying and the use of a cable, is therefore not only a mere concession, but at the same time a treaty binding both parts. The incorporators have complied with the terms of the agreement.

Important Will Case in Indiana—A Will Set Aside.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind., Monday, Aug. 23, 1865.

There have been but few men of the same limited education as WALTER HAYS in the Whitewater Valley, who have grown as rich as he was at the time of his death. At an early day he settled a few miles north of this place, in the large Miami bottom, which contains a soil as fertile as any to be found in the West. This broad valley is bounded on its western border by a continuous and beautiful ridge, on which the owners of the bottom land have chiefly built their residences. They are mostly rich, made so by the annual products of their soil. The whole big bottom, from Lawrenceburg to Elizabethtown, is in the hands of one or other of the HAYSES, GUARDS or MILLERS, who are all related more or less by cords of double and twisted affinities. Old Uncle WALTER was a sort of head man among them all, because he was thought to have the most money. His estate at his death amounted to not less than $300,000, about one-half of which consisted in bank stock.

Though wholly unversed in letters, Mr. HAYS possessed remarkable shrewd common sense, and at no time of his life was it an easy matter to cheat or to overreach him. In 1855, when he was about 66 years of age, he married a widow of 36.

At his death, at his residence, a year or so ago, at the age of about 80, a will was produced from this box, kept in the First National Bank of Lawrenceburg, of which his son-in-law, D. W. C. FRUIT, was President. By this will, after giving his household goods to the widow, made provisions for her to have one-fourth of the profits of his bank stock of $100,000, the Southeast Indiana Conference another fourth, and the two other fourths to his son and daughter. His real estate, of every description, was to be equally divided between his son and daughter, while all of his grandchildren whose mothers were dead were to receive only $2,000 when they become of age. The whole of the bank stock, at the expiration of the charter of said bank, to be equally divided between the son and daughter.

With this will the son, daughter and widow were fully satisfied. Though the law itself would have done better for the widow than the will, yet she was willing to accept it; but the rest of the connections were dissatisfied with the provisions of the will, and several of them doubted whether any such will had ever been made with the knowledge and consent of the deceased.

Hence the latter parties brought suit to set the will aside. The trial came up in the Court of Common Pleas early last Thursday week, Judge BRAKEMAN presiding, and lasted some eight or ten days. The counsel for the prosecution, or for the setting aside of the will, consisted of Hon. Wm. S. Holman, Daniel S. Major, John D. Haynes and Judge Francis Atkinson, while that of the defence consisted of Hon. Joseph E. McDonald, Philip L. Spooner, John Schwartz, Noah S. Given, Colonel Carter Gazlay and Geo. B. Fitch. Hon. Will. Cumback was retained by the South Indiana Conference.

The jury, after a brief consultation, brought in a verdict adverse to the will, which leaves the estate in the hands of the laws of the State.

This decision, of course, annuls all the provisions made for the benefit of the Methodist Church, as all of the property will now be divided among the heirs-at-law. A motion was made on Saturday by the counsel for the defence for a new trial, which was argued all day, but was finally overruled. I learn that the whole case will be carried to the Supreme Court. This the parties on both sides are fully able to do, as they have plenty of money.

The Cession of Cuba.

From the Philadelphia Telegraph.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Aug. 25, 1869.

At the State Department everything relating to negotiations now known to be in progress between General SICKLES and the Government at Madrid is kept unusually quiet.

Private letters, however, received in this city from an attaché of the American Legation at Madrid, say that everything looks hopeful for the success of the negotiations, and unless SERRANO and his Ministers should suddenly change their minds, General SICKLES hopes to be able to obtain the cession of Cuba on a basis advantageous to all parties concerned. This letter was written two weeks ago.

INCIDENTALS.

The Detroit Free Press (Democratic) deems it already settled that no party can succeed in the next Presidential election without inscribing upon its banner universal amnesty, and probably universal suffrage, a tariff for purposes of revenue and not protection, a speedy return to specie payments, and a most rigidly honest, faithful and economical administration of the Government, to the end that taxes may be largely diminished.

The gathering at Gettysburg excited the ire of the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle & Sentinel. It could not see how any Southern officer, who believed he was right in the war, could take part; and said that while there may have been a few men in the Southern army who would really be pleased at the idea of being permitted to parade their chains and blason their defeat before the admiring gaze of the great Yankee nation, it trusted that no son of Georgia would be induced to tarnish his and the State's noble name by such unsoldierly conduct.

Some wealthy farmers of Copake have completed arrangements for establishing a cheese factory in that village, the buildings of which will occupy about three acres of ground. It is contemplated to begin operations early next Spring, with 800 or 1,000 cows.

A Western Woman's Suffrage Convention is to be held in Chicago on the 9th and 10th of September. The call says it is intended to make this Convention one of surpassing interest, and that its object is to bring together the workers in the cause in the several Western States, that they may form each other's acquaintance, unite on some definite plan of action for the future—perhaps, if it seem best, effect a Western organization—and to arrange for a more general and complete movement in that section.

Hon. JOHN S. TENNEY, formerly Chief Justice of Maine, and one of the ablest jurists in the State, died at his residence in Norridgewock, on Monday, aged 80 years.

The term of service for which Commodore JOHN RODGERS was appointed to Charlestown Navy-yard has nearly expired, and it is reported that he will probably be placed in command of the South American Squadron, with the rank of Rear-Admiral. Business at Charlestown at present is brisk, about 3,000 mechanics and laborers are employed fitting out and repairing vessels. The same is true of the Portsmouth (N. H.) Yard.

A young man in Newburyport, Mass., prepared for his wedding, which was to have taken place on Sunday last, by purchasing a barrel of beer for his friends. The remorseless State Constable, however, seized the beer, and the young man actually refused to have the wedding performed unless he could have the liquor. The lady in the case is consequently experiencing the pain of hope deferred.

Governor PALMER, of Illinois, has appointed a full list of delegates from that State to the National Capital Convention in St. Louis. General JOHN A. LOGAN and Ex-Governor OGLESBY, are among them.

It being announced that Admiral FARRAGUT had written to a friend in high office at Washington, bitterly complaining that he is "laid upon the shelf like a useless piece of lumber, when there is so much to be done," the Albany Journal at once suggests that he be made "virtual Secretary of the Navy," in place of Admiral PORTER.

The Richmond Examiner & Enquirer tells us that Hon. R. M. T. HUNTER is attending to his private affairs in the retirement of his country home, and that it has the best reason for believing he could not be induced to reënter public life, such as it now is, by any consideration of his own advantage alone that could be offered him. This, in reference to his reported aspirations to a seat in the United States Senate.

Recently numbers of English immigrants have arrived at Montreal from Ontario and sought assistance from the St. George's Society, with the view of making their way home to England again. Whereupon the Montreal Gazette remarks that for three months past the resources of the Society and the time of its officers have been severely taxed in assisting immigrants forward to Ontario, and it cannot be expected that the same operations will be performed for their returning.

Miss CARRIE KETCHUM, the young girl who was shot and, it was supposed, mortally wounded by her lover, SALVADOR COLLOT, in the City Park in New-Orleans, two or three months ago, has since persistently refused to testify against him. She has unexpectedly recovered from her wounds, and on Friday last was taken before the Grand Jury, and still refused to answer any questions. The foreman reported the facts to the Court, and the Judge asked her if thirty days' confinement would soften her obstinacy, when she amid tears answered that she was not obstinate, but had nothing to say. The Judge finally told her that he was afraid, if forced to give evidence, she would commit perjury to save the accused from well-deserved punishment, and as the Grand Jury had requested it, he would discharge her from custody. She was married to COLLOT on the same evening.

Director T. H. SAFFORD, of the Chicago Observatory, proposes to establish a system of electric clocks for the city, to be controlled from the Observatory, and that the city appropriate annually to the use of that institution $1,000 for performing this service.

The Republicans are entering actively upon the campaign in Pennsylvania. Senator MORTON, of Indiana, is announced to speak in Pittsburg on the 2d of September, and Governor GEARY is to address several meetings in the northern part of the State.

The Boston Daily Advertiser, it is announced informally, has been sold to a new company, Messrs. DUNBAR and CHANDLER, who owned a controlling share, having disposed of their entire interest. Mr. GODDARD, formerly of the Worcester Spy, but lately first assistant editor of the Advertiser, will remain, and Mr. WATERS, who retains his interest, is to be Treasurer of the new company. The paper was purchased six years ago for $40,000; the price now paid is reported to be $225,000.

The Order of Good Templars of Utica have adopted resolutions declaring Senator O'DONNELL's explanation of his beer amendment to the License law of last Winter satisfactory. They formally exonerate him from any intention to favor or increase the sale of ale or beer by said amendment, and cordially express their confidence in his integrity and faithfulness to the temperance cause.

A New Chapter in a Michigan Whisky War—The Ladies Victors.

Correspondence of the Detroit Advertiser.

JONESVILLE, Mich., Saturday, Aug. 21, 1869.

We are in the midst of a social revolution on the liquor question, inaugurated by the Ladies' Phalanx upon the billiard saloons. The Common Council, moved by the large and respectable petition for closing the saloons, by a bare majority vote, passed resolutions, of an indefinite tenor, but looking rather to the carrying out of the object of the petition. The ladies heartily wishing to be spared what was the duty of the sterner sex and the public authorities, trusted to promises that something would be done, until they were convinced that they had been deceived, when they resolved to take the matter into their own hands. They visited the prosecuting attorney at Hillsdale and obtained his promise to attend to all reasonable complaints. Several complaints were at once instituted for liquor-selling and gambling. Two warrants were issued by Justice DENSEEN, of Hillsdale, against LEVI ACKER and ADOLPHUS LAKE, the keepers of the two principal saloons. The same day of trial was fixed for both suits, and the parties appeared in force. The Phalanx divided their numbers into parties of nine each, to consecutively attend the trials. The delegation consisting of the first nine procured carriages. Profuse proffers by weak-kneed gentlemen to wait on them were indignantly rejected, and they drove themselves to the trial, where they were met by sympathizing ladies and gentlemen of Hillsdale in the court-room, face to face with the saloon keepers and the confronting attorneys in order of battle. The prosecuting witnesses were selected from the most devoted saloon tipplers, and the innocence manifested on the trial by those witnesses, of drinking anything but "pop," was marvelous, until the public prosecutor reminded them that an imminent arrest for perjury might overtake them, when their memories began to brighten up, as shown by their blanched faces. In fine, the keepers were convicted, and fined each $10 and costs for the first offence, which they paid and closed their saloons.

CELESTIAL PHENOMENA.

Large Meteor Seen in Philadelphia on Tuesday Evening.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin, Aug. 25.

About 7:30 o'clock last evening a very unusual celestial display was observed by people who happened at the time to be gazing skyward. A large meteor shot from the northwest toward the north, taking a course slightly downward and then upward, in a sort of serpent form. Starting like a ball of brilliant light, it gradually increased as it sped along, leaving a bright, lustrous tail after it, very much like that of a comet, and finally bursting like a rocket, scattering lots of light from every portion of its circumference like what the pyrotechnists call a pin-wheel. What was somewhat remarkable about this phenomenon was the fact that long after what appeared to be the body of the meteor itself had disappeared, the lustrous tail remained, now increasing and now diminishing in brilliance, for at least ten minutes, when it commenced to gradually fade away. The time occupied between the commencement of the display and the bursting, as it seemed, of the meteor, must have been at least twelve or fifteen seconds, and the whole time up to the disappearance of the tail covered some twenty minutes. The phenomenon gave rise to quite a lively excitement. The people who witnessed it gave various opinions as to its cause, some holding that it was really the expected comet which astronomers had declared would be invisible to the naked eye, and others contending that it was merely one of those occasional luminous nebulous displays which are known to occur at this season of the year, and which have little importance in the estimation of scientific folks.

Three or four hours later, at about 11 o'clock, another strange light was seen shooting across the heavens. It was in the form of a bow straightened out, broadest in the middle, and tapering toward each end, being about two degrees in the widest part. It stretched from near the northwestern horizon considerably beyond the zenith in the southeast about fifty degrees. It seemed to be composed of a mass of thin vapor, appearing at one moment intensely bright, and in the next fading away, only to reappear more brilliantly than ever. It appeared to proceed from the same spot as the more brilliant meteor earlier in the evening. In about half an hour it had entirely disappeared.

The Rocky Mountains in a Second Twilight of Chromatic Shades—Superstitions of the Mountaineers.

Cheyenne Correspondence of the Omaha Herald.

Your paper having recently taken quite an interest in all that pertains to the growth of the agricultural and mineral resources of Wyoming, will not, I presume, refuse a little space to the feeble descriptions of a meteorological phenomena that is now transpiring each evening in the skies above the Rocky Mountains in that romantic territory.

Since the recent solar eclipse they have, upon the summit of the Rocky Mountain chain, what the inhabitants call a "second twilight," so brilliant with colors of mist, shade and fire-lights as to pain the eye in its steady gaze upon them, and to leave an impression on the mind that will never be obliterated.

Just as the sun is about to set, a heavy mist gathers on the mountain, and growing dense and denser, it shuts out entirely the last expiring rays of that luminous body; then all is darkness, or nearly so, for almost thirty minutes; when, all at once, the heavens become lit up from the horizon all around, far up to a small circle in the centre, with a livid glare of the most dazzling chromatic colors, seeming as though a tremendous bonfire was ablaze below, flowing and glaring in its steady flame above. This gorgeous and fearfully-beautiful scene lasts for nearly an hour, then steals quietly away; and the moon theretofore dimmed by its fiery lustre regains its ascendency and lights up the balance of the night in pale shadows as it is wont to do in every other clime.

Now, what causes these chromatic twilights? They were never before witnessed by any of the oldest mountaineers. I was in that section at this season last year, and I have never seen so grand and so thrilling twilights, and these have only occurred since the great solar eclipse of the 7th inst. What does it portend? What does it portend? How does it originate?

Old Sarshay—the learned Ute chief—stands in silence each night gazing at this wonderful phenomenon, and when asked what he thinks about it, replies, slowly and sadly: "Ugh! the Great Spirit is mad! He blows fire! His wigwam is in trouble! White man and red man better feel afraid, for the Great Spirit is mad,—he is heap angry!"

French PETE, the old trapper and miner, says: "It is now twenty-three years since I have seen the States. I have been eleven years in these mountains, and I never seen such fiery nights. The winds are damper; they blow milder and the air grows heavier. I don't know how to account for it. It has all happened since the eclipse of the sun. Something dreadful is going to happen. There will be some of these days that all the waters of the world will never drown out, and those days are coming rapidly."

If it be true, as one of the Professors of the Cincinnati Observatory says, that immense volumes of hydrogen gas were thrown out from the centre of the sun to the surface, during the recent solar eclipse, how long will it be before the oxygen will be thrown out, and the carbon become the ruling and destroying element?

I give these particulars by request, and there are numbers of people in this city who, on last Sabbath and Monday nights, witnessed, with me, this wonderful phenomenon on the summit of the Rocky Mountain chain, 8,262 feet above the level of the sea. The Cheyenne and Laramie papers all indorse this description.

The Late Eclipse—An Old Negro and his Chickens.

From the Utica Observer, Aug. 24.

Dr. PETERS, the eminent astronomer connected with Hamilton College, went West to observe the late eclipse of the sun. While there an amusing incident occurred which is told by a gentleman present at the time, who says that the effect of the eclipse upon the animal creation has been exaggerated. Horses or cattle paid little or no attention. Creatures that are accustomed to go to some particular place at dark did start for their places, and undoubtedly in some dismay. Birds were apparently astonished by being suddenly caught out late, and must have fancied that they had absent mindedly neglected to notice sunset. They flew rapidly. An old rooster took to the fence and folded himself up, but in two minutes and fifty-two seconds he crowed lustily. It was a very short night to him.

Saturday morning Dr. PETERS requested an old negro living near his observatory to watch carefully his big flock of hens, for at 4:45 they would go to roost. After the eclipse was over he came, evidently much excited. "How was it?" said the doctor. "Beats the debbil," said the negro. "When de darkness come ebry chick'n run for de hole in de barn. De fust ones got in, and de next ones run uber one anudder, and de last ones dey just squat right down in de grass. How long you know dis ting was a coming?" "Oh! I reckon we knew it more than a year," said the doctor. "Beats de debbil! Here you away in New-York knowd a year ago what my chick'ns was gwine to do dis bery afternoon, an' you nebber see de chik'ns afore nudder!"

The Lincoln Fund—What Has Become of the Money?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I am sorry to say Mr. CHURCHILL's statement with regard to the Lincoln Monument Fund is not so satisfactory as you seem to think it. He makes, in the first place, the singular admission that he, the Treasurer of the Fund, "studiously avoided having any of the funds in his hands," and suggests that Mr. ARTHUR, of the Columbia Fire Insurance Company, holds them. But it appears that of the $21,000 raised $10,000 has been paid over to Mr. BROWN, the sculptor; the remaining $11,000, Mr. CHURCHILL says, is invested in registered bonds, but he omits to state who holds these bonds; in whose name they are registered, and who has drawn the interest, and what disposition has been made of it. I find on inquiry that these bonds have not been in Mr. ARTHUR's possession for two years, and that he delivered them to Mr. CHURCHILL, and knows nothing more of them; but as Mr. CHURCHILL "studiously avoids having any of the funds in his hands," he cannot be in possession of them either. Where are they? I make these inquiries not by way of casting any imputation on Mr. CHURCHILL, but in order to enable him to gratify what he must admit is a legitimate curiosity.

Yours,

AN ANXIOUS INQUIRER.

SUSQUEHANNA RAILROAD WAR.

Continuation of President Ramsay's Testimony before the Referee—How Injunctions are Procured.

JOSEPH BUSH vs. The Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company; AZRO CHASE vs. The Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company.—The following is the most important portion of the testimony taken before Mr. E. L. LOWE, referee in these cases, on the contempt proceedings. The testimony previously given by Mr. RAMSAY in open Court, and which has been already published, being admitted, the examination by Mr. FIELD was continued as follows:

PRESIDENT RAMSAY'S TESTIMONY CONTINUED.

I cannot tell the amount of stock now outstanding; it is something over twenty thousand shares of full paid stock and some partly paid; the amount of partly paid stock is between nine and ten thousand shares; the unpaid stock is held by several persons; Mr. John Westervelt, Mr. John Cooley, Mr. E. R. Ford and Jared Goodyear, all these parties own full paid and par ly paid stock; there are some others, but I do not think of their names now; I hold about one thousand shares, and have held about one thousand shares since July last; subscriptions were made to the stock under the general law; the capital stock of the Company was $4,000,000; and it was not all filled up; these subscriptions were made some time in July; I believe no subscriptions have been made since July; Mr. Phelps had the subscription book; I suppose subscriptions could be received from time to time until the full capital is made up; even now, if not filled up; the four millions has not, I think, been all subscribed; I don't think I have seen the subscription book since it was made up in July; the middle of July; at the office in Albany; I can't tell exactly the amount of stock then subscribed; it was in the neighborhood of three millions, part paid; ten per cent. was paid on the partly paid stock; I have received subscriptions from persons who paid ten per cent., but there have been some six thousand of the shares forfeited; a portion of the forfeited shares was issued to Mr. Groesbeck; the rest has not been used, ex cept an arrangement with Mr. Chase; it belongs to the Company; the forfeited stock is not voted on; there are twenty thousand shares of full paid stock, and nine or ten thousand shares of partly paid stock; I don't think there were nineteen thousand shares of stock subscribed for and on which ten per cent. only has been paid; I think that amount has been subscribed, but whether ten per cent. has been paid I cannot say; I made a subscription for Mr. Groesbeck along about the same time this other stock was subscribed; in July last I subscribed, I think, about one thousand or fifteen hundred shares; I did not subscribe enough to make up the four millions; there were five thousand shares subscribed for Mr. Groesbeck, but I don't know anything about ten per cent. being paid; I subscribed for the five thousand shares for Groesbeck; I subscribed for one thousand or fifteen hundred for myself; I don't think I was the last who subscribed; we all subscribed about the same time; Westover, Goodyear, the others I named and R. H. Pruyn, that I have not mentioned; they subscribed I think one thousand shares; I did not at that time subscribe enough to make up the full stock—four millions; it was expected that the half million of Mr. Groesbeck would pretty nearly fill it up; that and what I subscribed would make it up within two thousand shares I think; no one to my knowledge has subscribed for those two thousand shares since; Groesbeck has never paid any money on the five thousand shares; I have paid ten per cent. on my shares and taken a receipt for it; these subscriptions were taken on the regular book; I cannot tell whether that book was among those taken to Mr. Smith's office; there was no agreement or understanding that the balance to make up the four millions should be subscribed in July or any time since; Mr. Groesbeck talked of taking up his stock, but did not want to have anything to do with it if it could be controlled by other parties; if he advanced his money, he wanted to know who had control of it; I subscribed for him, and afterward told him about it, but he did not pay the ten per cent.; I don't think there has been any understanding with any one about the two thousand unsubscribed shares; I thought, though I did not propose it to them, Dabney, Morgan & Co. would have taken those shares, so as to have the whole thing in the hands of parties we know and that could be relied on; Dabney, Morgan & Co. claimed six hundred shares of the stock, but never had it; between nine and ten thousand shares were subscribed in July; I don't know where the subscription book is; my advice has been to pay all the bills produced, and I have no doubt they will be; I have a memorandum of the stock of the Company at home—that is, of the stock list of last year; that I have altered from time to time for my own information, as I have known of transfers being made up to within six weeks of the books being closed; since that I have not kept much track except in my mind; I suppose I could take that book and get at pretty near where the stock is held up to within two months of the closing of the books; I have kept a run of how the stock was; I have been obtaining proxies up to the time of the subscription of the nine or ten thousand, and since then, as I made the account at the time the subscription was made; I had control of about two-thirds of the full-paid individual stock; I had more than that proportion of the town stock; I guess nine-tenths; then when they put the stock up to par and got buying the towns, they had some towns I claimed before that, and I had some towns which I had given them; I think there is some stock that had been forfeited, and the directors, by a vote of the Board, have permitted it to be paid up since; the Board have permitted such stock to be paid up in full within the year; I should think one or two hundred shares.

Q.—Is this the account of the unpaid stock, five thousand shares to Groesbeck, fifteen hundred to yourself, one thousand to Westover, one thousand to Cooke, one thousand to Goodyear, one thousand to Ford, one thousand to Pruyn? Was there any resolution of the Board authorizing these subscriptions to be made? A.—Not that I know of; subscriptions were received in the same manner as previous subscriptions; the books were opened in pursuance of the general law, and subscriptions received almost every year since the first subscriptions were obtained; this stock was subscribed in the same manner as previous stock; when I subscribed for the stock on the books, the market value of the stock was pretty nearly par or quite par; when these subscriptions were made they were made in good faith, intending to pay them up in full; Groesbeck's subscription was made by me in good faith, expecting he would take it and pay it in full; I did not suppose it would be paid until it was wanted for the double track perhaps; I do not know that the other members of the Board knew of the subscription; those who made subscriptions knew; a good many were members of the Board; I don't know that Mr. Herrick knew; it was not concealed from him; I never talked with him about it; I expected every one would know it.

Q.—Were the members of the Board adverse to you in interest apprised of the fact that the subscription was made? A.—I don't know that they were; it was not necessary to inform them.

Q.—Who were present when you made that subscription? A.—The parties that made it; it was all done at one time; I received the subscriptions; I have been agent from the beginning for receiving subscriptions; I think the subscriptions were made at my house; the parties I have mentioned, Pruyn, Westover, Cooke, Goodyear, Ford and Rice had a conference at my house; I think Sherman was there, but I am not quite sure; he did not subscribe; it was discussed that the parties who made the subscription had a large interest, and if the property went into the hands of parties who would, instead of attempting to build it up, destroy it, they did not think their stock would be worth anything, and this was done for the purpose of protecting our stock; I did not think it necessary to inform the directors in the other interest; they had the same means of knowledge; they were not invited to the conference; I wrote Groesbeck's subscription in another book; I went to the safe and tried it; tried to find the book the first subscriptions were made in of these 9,000 shares; I could not find it in the safe, and took another book with the usual heading and wrote in "J. Groesbeck, 5,000 shares;" I understood that I had authority to do that; I did not pay the ten per cent., because I did not have it to pay; I spoke to him about it some time during this month; I can't say whether it was Friday or Saturday of the week this suit was commenced; I don't think Mr. Phelps has received the subscription or put it on the stock list as all; I told him I had put the matter down in such a shape that if he chose to pay the ten per cent. he could do so; he didn't say whether he would pay or not; from what he said I supposed he had made up his mind not to pay it; I did not inform Mr. Phelps this subscription was good for nothing; the inspectors for this election are Samuel Hand, Ralph Lathrop, Wm. Hascall; they are not and were not then stockholders.

To Mr. Smith—There were 2,400 shares of stock, I understand, which were disposed of under contracts made in May, 1868, by Mr. Groesbeck and others; I disposed of the other part, the 600 shares of stock which had been forfeited; I sold 300 shares to Mr. Chase; he took $50,000 of secured mortgage bonds, with the option of taking $30,000 of forfeited stock; then there were 300 shares more issued to Mr. Pruyn upon the same terms; the other 3,000 shares remain in the Company; Dabney, Morgan & Co. own 600 shares; I understood Mr. Groesbeck to dissent from my action in subscribing for the 5,000 shares, by not paying the ten per cent.; I did not count or consider it a subscription until the ten per cent. was paid.

Henry Smith testified that he acted as counsel for Mr. Van Valkenburgh in obtaining the order for receiver, and the appointment of Mr. Pruyn; that he went with Mr. Rice, who represented the Albany and Susquehannah Company, and also with Mr. Peckham, Jr., representing the Company, to Judge Peckham's house on the evening of the 6th of August; stated to the Judge that he regretted disturbing him, but wanted an order, which he was anxious to have granted that night; stated the nature of the application and the substance of the complaint; Judge Peckham said he did not know about granting any such order as that; did not know that he had authority for it, and would want to examine, unless Mr. Smith could show him some authority to sustain his position; I told him I thought I could, and suggested that I would bring it; the Judge said no, but he would go to his office and look at it; we went to the office; the Judge read over the complaint, and said the case was one of the legation which he thought essential to work back to my office, after referring him to the authority I spoke of, amended the complaint, and had it reswornto by Mr. Van Valkenburgh; I brought it back to the Judge; he read it again, and said he would grant the order; I read and filed the bond, and he indorsed his approval on it, handed the papers to me, and requested me to have them filed; his office, which was called his "son's office," is and has been for years occupied by the Judge, where he has his library, writes his opinions, hears arguments and transacts his business as a Judge; there are two apartments; the outer room is occupied by young Mr. Peckham and his partner, Mr. Tremaine; the inner office by Judge Peckham and Mr. Lyman Tremaine;

To Mr. Field—The same set of rooms is occupied jointly by the son and father; young Mr. Peckham went with me to his father's house; there is a Judge who resides at Troy, and Judge Hogeboom resides at Hudson; no court had been held in Albany that day that I know of; I obtained the order for a receiver between 9 and 10 o'clock in the evening.

The further hearing was here adjourned.

THE COAL-MINERS' STRIKE.

Correspondence Between the Companies and Employes—They Fail to Agree.

From the Scranton (Penn.) Republican, Aug. 25.

The committee appointed at the miners' meeting, Monday, faithfully their mission yesterday, by calling upon Mr. STORRS, at his office, and presenting the resolution adopted by the men as a proposition for resumption of work. The resolution was given to the public in yesterday morning's Republican, and is herewith reproduced:

Resolved, That we recommend the acceptance of Mr. STORRS' proposition, upon the consideration that he continue the price until the 1st of April next; that is, $1 31 per diamond car, according to the rates paid by the Pennsylvania Company.

The following reply to this document was made in writing:

From the Newport Correswondence of the Evening Express.

Where the Court is, the Capital is, of course, and hence we have here breakfasts, matinées, dinners and soirées innumerable, as in other great capitals. The art of eating and drinking here has arrived to a high state of perfection, and the art of sleeping almost all day, and sitting up almost all night. We begin our "breakfast" at the villas about 12 o'clock, with croquet parties to follow on, till it is time to go home, and prepare for "the drive," the grand event of the day, when all the country is presenting itself in its costliest equipments money can buy. The expense of these outfits for man and beast, in liveries, harness, &c., equals anything ever seen in New-York, and I doubt whether anything excels it in Paris or London. General GRANT has been struggled for, almost fought for, to be thus driven by four horses or six—but which won I don't know at the present hour of writing, though I will bet on the team of six.

After Mrs. PARAN STEVENS had beautifully smothered the General in music and crinoline on Saturday, one of the hottest days of the season, and after Mrs. GRANT had been roasted in Fort Adams for about forty odd soldiers' and twenty generals' review, Ex-Senator MORGAN gave his reception to invited guests, pending which the rascally rain poured down in torrents and spoilt all the contemplated out-door sports of the villa. The music was in a tent, but the fête was all indoors, as well as the table, and not as designed. Then came a "hop" at the Ocean House in the evening, when General GRANT, despite his hard service during the day, losing no opportunity for frolic and fun, showed himself to the admiring hundreds of both sexes that now tenant that great caravanseras of humanity from forty to sixty days in the year. The entertainments of the morning were all handsome. Mrs. STEVENS' musical matinée of amateurs has never been surpassed, if equaled here, while the toilettes of the ladies were of the richest and costliest style of the most Parisian mould just out to the United States. All that wealth and luxury could furnish were in display, and "the morning" was one of unrivaled pleasure. Not less elegant in fashion and beauty was the reception of Mrs. MORGAN, despite the untoward weather.

On Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. CHARLES J. PETERSON, of Philadelphia, gave a brilliant entertainment at their costly villa here, which is one of the prettiest in the place. On Tuesday, A. A. Low, Esq., of Brooklyn, is to give in his villa here, a great evening reception, from 5 o'clock to 8 o'clock, with outdoors and indoors festivity to be combined—croquet for outdoors and dancing for indoors. On Friday, at the Academy of Music, Mrs. DERHAM gives a great ball, and on the 1st of September, Miss TRAVERS and Mr. FEARAY are to have a magnificent wedding. There are innumerable minor arrangements going on too numerous to mention.

To remind sinners here of their sins, a very lively crazy missionary from Baltimore has been parading some days up and down Bellevue-avenue, calling upon all to turn from the error of their ways, but his voice might as well have been a one crying in the wilderness. When, on Saturday, the coachmen and the hackmen were swearing loudly in impatience before the Stevens villa, because of the long delay in their approaching the entrance to the door, "Coachmen," said he, "if you will serve the devil, serve him patiently. Better serve the Lord, and serve Him fervently."

Death of Major Cram.

The death is announced of Major GEORGE CLARENCE CRAM, at Stamford, Conn., on Sunday last, the 22d inst. Major CRAM was a son of the late JACOB CRAM, and a brother of HENRY A. CRAM, Esq., and of Mrs. JAMES WATSON WEBB. He entered the army in 1861, his first commission as Captain of the Sixth Regular Cavalry having been dated May 14, of that year. In this regiment he served throughout the war. In the latter part of 1862, Captain CRAM found himself in command of his regiment, being the senior officer on duty with it, and early in 1863 the regular cavalry of the Army of the Potomac was organized into a brigade, the command of which was retained by him, although his rank was not increased. In both these positions he won the praise of his superiors, and FINANCIAL.

SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD

FIRST MORTGAGE

CONVERTIBLE BONDS

OF THE

Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company,

OF ILLINOIS,

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD AT THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, NEW-YORK. COUPONS PAYABLE APRIL AND OCTOBER.

FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX.

The Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad, upon whose property these bonds are issued, is now in process of construction, its terminus being the Cities of Danville and Pekin, in Illinois. The length of the road is 117 4-100 miles, its capital stock $3,000,000. The grading, bridging, and all the work necessary to connect and complete the road has been already done, and the whole line is ready for the rails. These are rapidly being put down, and a portion of the road is now in successful operation. The whole road will be completed early in the coming autumn.

These bonds are convertible into stock at par at the option of the holder, and may be registered in the name of the owner at any time if desired. The total amount of bonds is limited to $2,000,000. The security offered is, as we shall show, the very best. Already sums nearly equal to the total amount of the bonds to be issued have been expended on the road. The bonds, averaging less than $16,000 per mile, are secured by a first mortgage on the whole road and entire property of the Company. The road runs east and west, on the line of the principal and oldest emigrant wagon road in the State, passing through several populous towns and cities, and the richest agricultural district in Illinois—in a word, through the garden of the Garden State. Its local business alone will suffice to make it a first-class paying road, while, with its connections with many principal lines, its through trade must be such as to make it one of the most profitable in the country.

The road will be consolidated with the line from Danville to Indianapolis, making a line of 210 miles. At Indianapolis connection will be made with all the through lines to New-York and Baltimore; at Danville with the Toledo, Wabash and Western. In fact, the road will form a main link in the direct communication of the principal Atlantic cities with southern Illinois, with Keokuk and Burlington, Iowa, and thence with Omaha and the Pacific.

It will complete a direct line from Boston to Peoria, Keokuk, Burlington, Omaha and the far West, via Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland and the Bellefontaine Railroad to Indianapolis or Danville, or via Toledo and Wabash and Western Road.

It will form the most direct line from New-York to the same points West via the New-York Central, Lake Shore and Bellefontaine Roads, to Indianapolis and Danville; or via the Erie, Atlantic and Great Western, to Dayton, Ohio; and via Indiana Central, to Indianapolis. Danville, Bloomington, &c., as well as from Philadelphia, via the Pennsylvania Central to Harrisburg, Pittsburg, Columbus, Dayton and Indianapolis.

It will form an important link in the communication of Baltimore and the South with the Great West, the Northwest and the Pacific via Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to Parkersburg, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Danville and Peoria.

Thus, with the combined advantages of a certainty of a remunerative local business and a through business, which, as a connecting link to so many diverging and principal lines, it must necessarily have, it is reasonable to presume that the earnings of this road must exceed, in proportion to its length, those of any other railroad in Illinois. The following table shows the earnings of some of the principal railroads in Illinois:

Railroads.	Miles road.	Earnings per mile.
Chicago, Alton and St. Louis....	290	$13,900
Chicago and Northwestern.....	1,152	11,670
Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific	410	10,012
Toledo, Wabash and Western...	821	7,261
Illinois Central.....	706	10,115

It is safe to estimate the receipts of the Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad for the first year at $12,000 per mile, or on 117.05 miles, $1,404,600.

FIRST YEAR.

Receipts, as estimated..... at	$1,404,600
Estimated expenses as follows:
Operating expenses, 50 per cent.....	$702,200
Interest on $1,000,000 gold bonds, 7 per cent.....	140,000
Premium, 40 per cent. on $140,000 gold.	56,000
Set aside as Sinking Fund.....	10,000— 908,300
Leaving a net profit over interest and expenses.....	$496,300

Or over 16 per cent. for dividends on the capital stock the first year of its operation. Without doubt, a progressive increase thereafter, each year, would be the result. The geographical location of the road is alone sufficient to convince all of its great value and usefulness.

The stock of the Rock Island and the Illinois Central, the Chicago and Alton, Burlington and Quincy Roads, are all selling at from above par to nearly 200, while none of them are more favorably located, and the competition with either is much greater than this can have. There is no reason why the stock of this road shall not sell as high as that of the above. Hence the privilege of converting these bonds into stock of this Company at par any time desired greatly increases their value.

After personally and thoroughly examined this road, we accepted the agency for negotiating its bonds. We now offer them at 95 and accrued interest in currency. With the utmost confidence we recommend them as a reliable and safe security and profitable investment.

At the present price they pay 10 per cent. currency—over 45 per cent. more than the same amount invested in Five-Twenty Bonds—besides the advantage of being free from tax, and the prospect of a speedy advance in the stock of the road on completion, into which they may be converted.

Government Bonds and Gold received at their market value in exchange without commission. Bonds forwarded by express free of charge.

Full particulars furnished by the undersigned, financial agents of the Company.

SCIENCE.

The Proceedings at Salem—Levee of the Board of Trade—Papers Read on the Sixth Day—Interesting Statements Regarding the Ainoes, or "Hairy Men."

From Our Special Correspondent.

SALEM, Mass., Tuesday, Aug. 24, 1869.

The Association having accepted an invitation from the Board of Trade to a reception, gathered last evening in large numbers at the vestry-room of the Tabernacle Church. A large number of the citizens responded also to the invitation of this body, and were present to welcome the city's guests. The large room was well filled with ladies and gentlemen. A very agreeable surprise awaited the great body of the assembly, in the shape of an organization as a quasi association, by the appointment of DR. GOULD as Chairman, and Professor MORSE as deheneter. There was placed in the hands of the Chairman a list of titles of papers of a facetious character, to which prominent persons in the audience were called upon to respond, which was happily done in the same style as the subject assigned them. As each speaker appeared upon the rostrum, the ready pencil of the delineator prepared some characteristic figure illustrative of the subject upon the blackboard. I have never seen a more rapid fancy nor a happier execution. The grotesque figures seemed to spring instantaneously from the fingers of the artist, and they surprised every one by their appropriateness. Thus, and with promenading, listening to music and conversation, the evening was pleasantly passed.

OPENING OF THE SIXTH DAY.

This forenoon, at the proper time, the Association was called to order by the President, Colonel FOSTER. There being several propositions to form new Sections, and this action requiring a change in the Constitution, the Standing Committee reported the following amendment, which was adopted and referred to the action of the next annual meeting:

"Rule 5 to be amended by inserting the following before the last sentence, viz.: 'When not otherwise ordered, the Sections shall be as follows: For Section A—1. Mathematics and Astronomy. 2. Physics and Chemistry. 3. Microscopy. For Section B—1. Zoology and Botany. 2. Geology and Paleontology. 3. Ethnology and Archæology.'"

The following members were elected:

Mr. Felix Foncon, Milwaukee, Wis.; Isaac T. Smith, New-York; A. D. White, Ithaca, N. Y.; J. H. Bachelder, Salem, Mass.; Wm. Cogswell, Salem, Mass.; G. B. Loring, Salem, Mass.; John Cumming, Woburn, Mass.; A. W. Hall, New-York.

The Association then resolved itself into sections.

SECTION A.

Professor SILLIMAN was named Chairman for the day, and the first paper was by Professor VAN DER WEIDE, on the harmonics of the waves in the visible and invisible parts of the spectrum. He claimed that essentially the actinic scale was an octave of the color scale, and the heating scale an octave below. He proved this by showing the number of vibrations per second in different parts of the scale. He also pointed out the harmonics of the lines in the spectrum. The paper gave rise to much discussion, participated in by Professors HENRY, YOUNG, OLIVER, Dr. SAMPSON and others.

Other interesting papers were read. Professor HEINRICHS read a paper on molicular forces. Professor WALLING, of Easton, Penn., gave a physico-metaphysical paper upon Elemental Fibres, illustrated by models, in which he attempted to give a conjectural explanation of the constitution of matter and of the forces in action among them. Professor C. A. SEELY's brief communication on the volumetric determination of carbonic acid, was read by Dr. BARKER. Professor SILLIMAN gave an interesting paper on the relation between the intensity of light produced by the combustion of illuminating gas and the volume of gas consumed. Mr. W. W. WHEILDON narrated a case of the freezing of fresh water in pipes immersed in salt water. Professor NORTON gave a paper entitled the "Physical Theory of the Principle of the Lever," the object of which was to show how the laws of the lever might be derived from the admitted laws of atomic force; and Dr. BARKER gave an interesting account of his investigations in chemical physiology to determine the relation between brain-work and the waste of tissues. The latter described the experiments which had been tried to show the function of the muscles, which seemed to be merely to transform heat into motion, and was itself nearly unchangeable. So his investigations went to show that the brain was only the material for transforming thought into action.

SECTION B.

Professor CH. FRED. HARTT indicated upon a map of South America, the locality of the different geological formations he had observed in some extensive travels in Brazil, when engaged in the examination of its natural history under the direction of Professor AGASSIZ. The subject was also illustrated by some fine fossils.

Professor AGASSIZ thought that we have here the first really geological map of the eastern coast of Brazil. Professor HARTT and himself were engaged in the geological survey of that country, in different fields and acting independently, and sometimes coinciding and then again disagreeing, and this disagreement will probably continue. The Professor felt sure that the whole coast of Brazil was of cretaceous formation, and gave extended reasons for this opinion. He also felt sure that the whole of the interior of Brazil had been formed by glaciers, and this subject needed to be studied by geologists, so that the conviction would be forced upon them that the glacier formation was universal.

NEW SPECIES OF FISHES.

Professor THEODORE GILL communicated a paper on "Some New Species of Fishes Obtained by Professor Orton in the Valleys of the Maranon and Napo, in South America." About two dozen species were obtained, and of these most were species previously unknown to science. The collection indicated a general similarity to the fish-fauna of the Lower Amazon and the tropical portion of America generally. Several of the species had been described from specimens obtained from the lower portion of the Amazon and elsewhere, but most were peculiar, as far as known, to the regions from which the specimens enumerated were caught, and of one genus (represented by the species Centromochlus) no representative had been found except in the Maranon and Napo. The third species alluded to was new. Among the fishes collected by Professor ORTON was the interesting form described many years ago by HUMBOLDT, who procured his specimens from the stream of water ejected by a volcano in the Valley of Quito, and which has not since been rediscovered, notwithstanding the interest connected with it. The affinities of the species were commented on and its peculiar generic character demonstrated.

Professor AGASSIZ insisted upon the existence of many fish fauna, peculiar not only to different hydrographical basins of Brazil, but to different portions of the Amazon, and indicated the limits and character of the various fauna observed by himself during his travels in Brazil, by a third and new species, not peculiar, so far as known, to the Upper Amazon, or Maranon and Napo streams, in the Valley of Quito. They rediscovered a species described many years ago by HUMBOLDT, who obtained many specimens in streams ejected by a volcano of that valley, but which had not since been found. The relations and peculiar characters of the species were commented upon, and the name Cyclopium Humboldtii claimed for it.

Professor GILL thought that if Professor AGASSIZ would recall the words used by him, he would be convinced that there was no essential differences in the opinions entertained by him and the speaker. The number of species described as new indicated that he (the speaker) was disposed to believe that the Upper Amazon was distinguished as to its fish faunas specifically from the lower portions; but he was indisposed to regard such combinations as fauna, according the definitions of SCLATER and others in that respect.

Professor AGASSIZ did not think that the distribution of SCLATER was applicable to the fishes.

THE PUPA.

At the request of Professor AGASSIZ, Mr. MORSE explained the character of the so-called Pupa. As near as he could judge from the specimens he should be more likely to refer it to Purpura, a shell entirely unlike Pupa in having an operculum, and its relations to certain groups of marine shells in the characters of the teeth, &c. Pupina was also confined to the tropics, and thus we should have a nearer relation established in the character of tropical ferns with mollusks of this kind.

SUB-SECTION C.

Professor CLINTON ROOSEVELT read a paper entitled, "The Constitution of Man, as Modified by Light, and Heat, and Cold." He began by statements of general principles on which all science is founded, and analyzed the sources of all we know objectively, as we shrink instinctively from extreme heat and cold, and find the genial warmth between the two extremes, which we term good. That there is in us a spark of the Divinity by which we judge contrasts subjectively. But inasmuch as each sense is created to be impressed by a more or less rapid series of vibrations of etherical matter—the eye receives impressions of light from vibrations of etherical matter the .77th of a second long, and the ear the .140th of a second long, and the nervous fluid travels at the rate of 971 feet per second,—we have in these elements the foundation of all knowledge of the external universe. That the same vibrations of the one etherical element which operates in chemistry works also on the mind of man by certain laws which are as immutable as the laws of gravitation, light or heat, or electricity, the laws of which were stated and shown to be in accordance with the laws of mind. That darkness in the moral atmosphere tended to misery and degradation, all the same as in the physical; the malaria engendered in dark lanes and loathsome habitations sent forth pestilence to walk at night and stalk abroad at noonday. That the more men saw the bond of connection between the sciences and humanity, the more would civilisation increase, and men should study such works as Dr. DRAPER's for particulars, and learn that extreme heat and cold destroy the human constitution, while the civilising race can be developed to perfection only within some five degrees of a certain isothermal line about the centre of the temperate zone. That if we would extend the area of civilization, we must find artificial means to temper the extreme cold of habitations in the northern climes and extreme heat down south. That means had been discovered by a member of this Association, as he claimed, to make one ton of coal produce the effect of fourteen tons of ice, and it was difficult to tell how far nations, with a truly scientific system, might be yet improved.

THE AINOES OR HAIRY MEN.

Professor BICKMORE, of Madison University, read an interesting paper on the "Ainoes or Hairy Men of Yesso, Saghalien and the Kurile islands." It has long been known, he said, that a race of men lives in those islands, whose bodies are so profusely covered with hair that they have been called hairy men. Professor BICKMORE during all his travels over the eastern and northern parts of Asia visited Yesso, the most northern of the Japan group. From Hakodadi, its chief city, he traveled northward over a mountain chain and came down to Volcano Bay, so named by Commodore PERRY's Expedition, on account of the many volcanoes along its shores. Following round this bay to its head he came to a village of this strange people. Their houses are made of a rude frame-work of sticks and covered with millet straw or coarse hay. The walls are only four feet high, and holes in these under the eaves serve for windows. They have no benches or stools. A few boards and sticks resting on stones or blocks of wood, and covered with the skin of some wild animal, form their only lounges and beds. Their cooking utensils are comprised of a few iron pots obtained from the Japanese, and their dishes are all made of wood or from the valves of large shells. Their only clothing is manufactured by stripping off the bark of a tree and removing the fibrous inner layers which are twisted between the thumb and forefinger into a continuous line of the size of a mackerel line. To weave cloth from this cord a number of pieces of it are fastened at one end to a post, and at the other to a stick, which is held horizontally. The filling is then passed through from right to left and vice versa. All the cloth they have is manufactured in this slow and laborious manner. Their dress consists of a loose cloak or dressing-gown.

The only thing they cultivate is a little millet, their whole subsistence being dependent on fishing and hunting. They are, therefore, perfect savages in regard to civilization, while, at the same time, their great mental characteristic is an overflowing good nature, which manifests itself in every possible way. Every where Professor BICKMORE was kindly received into their houses, and all the many questions his interpreter asked were most politely and fully answered.

During a part of the Summer their bays and friths are literally filled with salmon, and at such times a stock of food is laid up for the coming year, by drying the fish in the sun, without salt, and storing them in small houses built on high posts. Each principal house has one of these store-houses near it. They hunt the bear and the deer. The skin of the former their Japanese masters oblige them to give up to them, but those of the deer they are allowed to keep for their own use. The skull of the bear is always carefully kept as a trophy, and placed on the top of a pole near the house of the man who killed it. In front of a single house Professor BICKMORE counted twenty-nine of these skulls.

The two great physical characteristics of this people are, first, that their eyelids are horizontal and open widely, and are not oblique, and open but partially as in all branches of the Mongol family; and, secondly, that their cheek bones are not prominent. These two important characters, which are constant except in the descendants of those Japanese officers who have taken Aino women for concubines, separate them from the Mongol family, (to which they have been hitherto referred by all ethnologists,) and show that this peculiar people, in that remote corner of the earth, are really a fragment of our own Caucasian, or Indo-European, race. This view is confirmed by the wonderful development of their hair, which has been regarded as their chief characteristic, though it is really of only secondary importance. In this respect they come nearest to the Russian, or Slavonian branch of the Indo-Europeans. Their language is peculiar, and is known to differ entirely from that of the Japanese, and of every other people near them. It is supposed to be a syllabic language.

From the Japanese histories we learn that this people have inhabited the islands known as the Japan Group, at least, for half a century before the time of Neuchadnessar, yet it was only in 1867 that Professor BICKMORE's researches showed their true position. Their entire population is supposed to be from 10,000 to 12,000. Under the iron tyranny of the Japanese this people are passing away, and Professor BICKMORE thinks that "if the enlightened nations of the western world had been but a few centuries later in reaching that distant region of the East, this people would only have been known to us by a few passages in the writings of the Japanese histories, and even then such references would have been regarded by scrupulous investigators as apocryphal and more properly classed with myths and fables."

Professor BICKMORE exhibited several stereoscope views of these Ainoes, and maps carefully colored to show the areas they occupy.

At the conclusion of Mr. BICKMORE's paper, Professor W. P. BLAKE expressed the satisfaction with which he had listened to it, particularly as he had become familiar with the appearance and characteristics of the Ainoes by constant contact with them for some months while traveling in the mountans of the interior of the northern part of Japan. He confirmed in general the statements of Mr. BICKMORE, and described the Ainoes as a race entirely distinct from the Mongolian races, and as more nearly allied to European types, but yet different, especially in the great quantity of long black hair covering the head, lips, chin and the whole body, even to the fingers and toes; broad, flattened noses, and thick lips. Their foreheads are remarkably square, and prominent over the eyes, which are horizontal and not oblique, as in the Mongol races. They have considerable mechanical skill, are fond of carving wood, and they weave some of their coarser garments. They are good mountaineers, which the Japanese are not, and they are fond of hunting and fishing in the interior, while the Japanese seem to prefer living on and near the coast. In the journeys of the Japanese to the Mikado, the supreme ruler of the interior of Yesso, they depend upon Ainoe guides. As to the origin of this remarkable race of men, so little known and yet so very ancient, Professor BLAKE thought that they must have originated in this region, and that they could hardly be regarded as having migrated in early times from Central Asia. They appeared to be a race capable of great advancement and culture if they could only be relieved from the oppression of the Japanese.

MERRIMACK.

BOSTON, Aug. 25.—At the session to-day of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, resolutions were adopted expressing the earnest desire of the Association, that the International Statistical Congress will decide to make the United States its place of meeting at an early day. A resolution was also adopted that the Association cordially approves the proposed adaptation of American coinage to the metric system, by making the value of the dollar precisely that of one and one-half grammes of fine gold. Among other papers read in the various sections was one by Professor E. B. ELLIOTT, who followed this with a paper on the laws of trade, wherein he considered the laws of production and consumption, with their intermediate agencies, and the amount of revenue that would accrue under given circumstances. Another paper was presented by Mr. FELIX FONCON on the construction of three maps of Europe, France and North America on a gnomonic projection, with a view to the distribution of mineral wealth and the study of the earth's figure. Professor VAN DE WEYDE also read a paper claiming that electricity is not a self-existent fluid, but a mode of motion, and that matter is necessary to its transmission through a vacuum.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

The Mistake Concerning the "Astral" Oil—A Breeze About Private Sessions—Should the Public Know All that the Board May Do?—Dismissal of the President's Son.

The Metropolitan Board of Health met yesterday afternoon, President G. B. LINCOLN in the chair.

Colonel BLISS the attorney of the Board, explained a very grave error which he made at the previous session, with regard to the dangerous character of "PRATT's Astral Oil." It was DEVOE's patent petroleum that was examined by the chemist, and found to be below the test, and not the one just mentioned. The "Astral" had never been analyzed by the Board, and was, as far as he knew, perfectly safe. The mistake grew out of ignorance of the fact that the old firm of DEVOE & PRATT had been dissolved, and that each partner was selling a different patent oil, canned in the same manner, and sold in Fulton-street at neighboring stores. He regretted the error very much, he said.

Commissioner MANIERRE called attention to the fact that there is a variance of the oil standards of the Board of Health and the law of the State as administered by the Fire Commissioners.

The attorney explained that the standard of the Board of Health related to the sale of illuminating oils, while the State law referred merely to the storage of the same for any purpose whatever.

On motion of Commissioner STEPHEN SMITH, the chemist of the Board was directed to add to his weekly reports of operations at the Metropolitan Gas Company's works all particulars of the processes employed from time to time.

The same Commissioner moved that the final hearing in the matter of the complaint against the New-York Rendering Company for maintaining a nuisance at its dock be made the special business of the next meeting, which was carried. It was strongly intimated in the course of desultory conversation between members that the days of the nuisance are nearly numbered. It is said that the Company's rendering boats will be removed on the 10th of September.

The President complained that a private session was held last week, at which the charges against his son, who was a clerk in the Brooklyn office, were the subject of inquiry, and that he (the President) was not informed of the meeting until he saw a report of its proceedings in the newspapers on the following morning. It was a very unfair act, he thought, and never should have been done.

Commissioner STONE was glad of an opportunity to protest against the practice of some person in the confidence of the Board divulging the proceedings of private sessions. He had been informed that the Acting Secretary was the party who, in this instance, had given the information.

Colonel HASTINGS, the party alluded to, admitted that he had shown the minutes to a reporter, but that he had done so by authority of the Board. If his own personal convictions had been followed out, he would not have given the information, he said, as he did not believe it to have been ready for the public eye.

Commissioner MANIERRE believed that every act of the Board, whether in private or public session, which went upon record, was open to a reporter or any other citizen who wished to know of it.

Commissioner STONE said if that was the case, then he would vote to abolish private meetings entirely. If the reporters must see the record, then of what use is it to hold a private meeting, he asked.

The attorney here read from the act under which the Board was established, in which it is declared that the Board "may establish reasonable regulations as to the publicity of its proceedings."

Commissioner SWINBURNE moved that, hereafter, no private meeting of the Board should be held, for the transaction of business of such a nature as might necessarily constitute a part of its records.

Commissioner BOSWORTH desired to know what kind of private business the Board could transact that should not form a part of its records.

Commissioner SWINBURNE offered to amend, but a motion to lay on the table intervened, and the resolution was tabled.

The Board then entered upon a private session, from which reporters were excluded. The full membership of nine were present. The object of the meeting was to consider the question of dismissing Mr. FREDERICK LINCOLN from his Clerkship in the Brooklyn office.

The charges preferred against Mr. LINCOLN, by Assistant Sanitary Superintendent STILES were to the effect that he had been irregular in attending his desk, and had not performed his work efficiently. Nearly one hundred pages of testimony were presented by the referee. The evidence supported the charges, in a measure; that is to say, it showed that the defendant had been absent at times from his desk, but it also showed that he was absent by tacit consent of his superiors. It was further shown that he performed a great deal of work at home in the evenings, and that he had frequently spent nearly all of the night in so doing. It was admitted that he did as much work as any other clerk in the department, and that he always did it unexceptionably well.

It appearing that Mr. LINCOLN had not been permitted to introduce testimony in his own behalf, before the referee, Commissioner SWINBURNE moved to reopen the inquiry, so that he might have an opportunity to be heard, as a simple act of justice. The motion failed to elicit a single other vote than that of the mover. The attorney gave his opinion of the legal aspects of the case, and a vote was then taken resulting in the dismissal of Mr. LINCOLN. His father, the President, did not vote, of course, but the other members did. All voted for dismissal except Commissioner SWINBURNE, who evidently thought that the case had not been fairly treated by the Board.

An adjournment for one week was finally ordered.

THE COMING STATE CONVENTION.

Syracuse the Place, and Sept. 29 the Day Appointed—The Appointments.

The Republican Union State Committee met yesterday afternoon at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, Hon. HAMILTON HARRIS, of Albany, in the chair, and Mr. JAMES TERWILLIGER, of Syracuse, acting as Secretary. A very large proportion of the members was present. No important business was done beyond appointing Syracuse as the place, and the 29th day of September as the time for holding the next Republican State Convention.

A delegation from the Executive Committee of the New-York State Temperance Convention, also in session yesterday, waited on the State Committee with the view of getting their co-operation in urging the passage by the next Legislature of a law leaving it to the several towns and wards in the State to decide, each for itself, by ballot, whether or not intoxicating liquors shall be sold within said towns or wards. The Union State Committee took no action regarding the proposal.

The following is the official call for the State Convention:

Whereas, At the last Republican State Convention the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the representation in the State Conventions of the Republican Party in this State hereafter shall be as follows: First, one delegate from each Assembly District. Second, one additional delegate from each Assembly District for every 1,500, or fractional part of 1,500, which shall be over 750 Republican votes polled in such district; the apportionment to be made upon the Presidential vote of 1868, and every four years thereafter.

Resolved, That the State Central Committee be and are hereby directed, in the call for future Conventions of the party, to order the representation on the above basis.

Therefore, in pursuance of said resolution, all electors who supported the Republican candidates, GRANT and COLFAX, and all who now support the Administration, are requested to select delegates to meet in State Convention at Syracuse, on the 24th day of September next, at 12 o'clock M., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the several state offices to be filled by election on the 2d day of November next, and to discharge such other duties as may devolve upon such Convention.

The several Republican Assembly Committees or Associations are hereby directed to issue calls for the election of such delegates in their respective districts in accordance with the following apportionments:

LOCAL POLITICS.

Independent German Democrats of the Seventeenth Ward.

Last night the German Independent Democratic Club of the Seventeenth Ward, which has already organized eleven branch clubs, held its meeting at No. 128 Third-street, about fifty members being present. Mr. F. EURING, the Chairman, opened the proceedings by remarking that the German Democrats are now rallying their forces to get their just share in the distribution of offices. They proposed to present the names of their candidates for local offices to the Tammany Hall Committee, and, if rejected by the latter, to run them independently. He said that, had it not been for the influence of the Seventeenth Ward, Judge MICHAEL GROSS would never have got the nomination for Judge of the Marine Court. After five delegates had been elected to attend a general meeting of the Independent German Clubs of the Seventeenth Ward, in order to form a Central Association, addresses were made by Mr. F. EURING and others, and then the meeting adjourned.

Mechanics and Workingmen's Democratic Association.

It seems that the Democrats have begun an early campaign this season. The Tenth Ward Democratic Workingmen's Association, not to be behind hand, held a large meeting at Mechanics' Institute, Broome-street, last evening. Mr. MORRIS F. DOWLEY presided. Speeches were delivered by a number of prominent gentlemen of the Democratic organization of the Tenth Ward, and resolutions adopted taking the grounds of the Seventh Ward Association in regard to the overthrow of BELMONT and the substitution of WM. M. TWEED in his place. Mr. DOWLEY's name was placed before the members of the Democratic Party for member of Assembly, and was hailed with tremendous cheering.

Twentieth District Republican Association.

The Union Republican Association of the Twentieth Assembly District, met in Third-avenue near Sixty-first-street last evening. Mr. N. H. BABCOCK presided. The only business transacted was the election of several new members.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

New-York.

RICHARD FARMER, 36 years of age, who resides in Fifty-seventh-street, near Third-avenue, attempted to commit suicide during yesterday afternoon by jumping from a Fulton Ferry boat when in midstream. He was so quickly rescued by the hands of the steamtug Birbeck, that he received little injury. He was subsequently sent to Bellevue Hospital.

The New-York Fruit-Growers' Club will hold their regular meeting and discussion to-day at 1:30 P. M., in the Hall Nos. 35 and 37 Park-place.

New-Jersey.

While the steamer Naushon was returning from Staten Island last evening, and when near the Newark Bridge, a man named GEORGE WARDELL, a resident of Newark, jumped overboard. A man and his two sons jumped after him, but he refused to allow them to assist him. By great efforts, however, on their part, they effected his rescue. The man, who had recently arrived from California, is supposed to have been suffering from temporary aberration of mind.

A murderous assault, under great provocation, was committed last evening in New-street, Newark, by a colored barber named JAMES FRANCIS. It appears while quietly passing along the street, FRANCIS was followed by a crowd of men and boys, who insulted and assaulted him. He took out a penknife and made after a little fellow named CHRISTIAN RUDER, residing at No. 281 Orange-street, stabbing him badly. FRANCIS was arrested and held for examination.

A horse thrust his head through the window and his feet through the side of a horse car, in Bergen, yesterday morning, about 10:30, severely injuring Mr. P. M. HOLMES, of Danbury, Conn., who was riding in the car at the time.
